Beware War With Czechs, Britain Will Warn Hitler

Would Involve France, Soviet, Maybe England, Simon to Repeat.

Speech Tomorrow To Clarify Stand

Government Admits Its Policy of Temporizing Is a Failure.

By Joseph Driscoll.

Special Cable to The Post.

London, Aug. 25.—Downing street decided today to warn Germany that any invasion of Czechoslovakia may provoke a general war, which would involve not only France and Russia, the allies of the Prague Republic, but possibly even Britain.

The decision to abandon the deliberate policy of diplomatic silence and Pollyanna optimism, and to speak out bluntly, reminding Germany once more that a calculated little war of short duration might quickly spread into a devastating general war of long duration, was agreed upon after a two-hour conference at the foreign office. The conferees were Viscount Halifax, foreign secretary; Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer, and Frank Trelawny Arthur Ashton-Gwatkin, foreign office counselor, who has been acting as right-hand man to Viscount Runciman, the British mediator in Prague, between the Czechs and the Sudeten Germans.

Premier's Rest Broken.

The foreign office was in constant touch by telephone, throughout the day, with Prime Minister Chamberlain, who was resting in the country.

The task of warning Germany was delegated to Sir John Simon, who was already scheduled to deliver a political speech at Lanark on Saturday. Into this speech he will now weave a few carefully worded paragraphs, which, according to government spokesmen, will be of "exceptional importance." The same quarters describe the Czechoslovakian situation as "very grave."

Ashton-Gwatkin, who flew here from Prague yesterday after a secret interview with Konrad Henlein, leader of the Sudeten Germans, reported that an equitable solution of the Czech-German quarrel is still possible, provided both sides would show good will, but neither side concedes much. Peace so obviously depends upon a quick solution, that something must be done soon to procure one.

Whitehall Admits Error.

Whitehall now admits its policy of silence and professional optimism has not achieved anything. It admits it is time the British public and world opinion had a frank statement of the British attitude.

Therefore, Whitehall passes out the tip: "Keep your eye on Simon's speech Saturday night." The trend of that speech was decided upon in Downing Street today and yesterday, but it may be revised at the last minute if certain assurances are forthcoming from the Germans or the Czechs. Pending its actual delivery, there is a disposition to believe the Simon declaration may be as significant for peace as that made by a pre-war chancellor of the exchequer, David Lloyd George, when he delivered his historic warning to Germany at the time of the Agadir crisis.

No More Commitments.

The British government still stands by what Prime Minister Chamberlain said in the House of Commons March 24. Whether the adroit Sir John Simon will clarify any of Chamberlain's ambiguities is not certain, but in any case there

Tugwell's Wife Wins Divorce In Nevada for Mental Cruelty

Mrs. Florence Arnold Tugwell, shown here, was granted a divorce from Rexford Guy Tugwell, former New Deal adviser, in Yerington, Nev., on charges of cruelty, which was described as mental only.

Mate of First 'Brain-Truster' Gets Decree Quietly and Court Agrees to Seal Charges in Case; Provision Made for Her and Child.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Yerington, Nev., Aug. 25.—In secret proceedings yesterday, Mrs. Rexford Guy Tugwell, wife of the former Undersecretary of Agriculture and one-time member of the New Deal "brain trust," won a divorce on grounds of mental cruelty.

Mrs. Tugwell had been living secluded on a dude ranch near Reno, and only close friends knew of her presence there until she appeared in court. The court ordered details of the cruelty charges sealed. She is reported to have left Nevada since obtaining the decree.

TUGWELL.

It was learned that provisions had been made for the support of Mrs. Tugwell and a daughter, Marcia, 14. Tanis Tugwell, 22, another daughter, is a clerk with the Farm Security Administration in Washington.

The Tugwells were married in Buffalo, N. Y., June 7, 1914. Mrs. Tugwell is the former Florence Arnold.

Dr. Tugwell, when Resettlement administrator, initiated the development of Greenbelt—called "Tugwelltown"—model village several miles outside of Washington in Maryland.

Handsome, a noted scholar and writer, Tugwell, then a Columbia University professor, joined President Roosevelt's inner circle of advisers in 1932 and soon was regarded as "No. 1 brain truster." In 1934, when appointed Undersecretary of Agriculture, he was bitterly attacked in the Senate before being confirmed. During the last Presidential campaign Tugwell was denounced by New Deal opponents as a plotter preparing to overthrow the American form of government, but through it all he remained quiet and aloof.

Late in 1936 Tugwell resigned as Undersecretary of Agriculture and Resettlement administrator to accept an executive post with the American Molasses Co.

Air Authority Opens Inquiry On Mail Rates

On the fourth day of its existence the Civil Aeronautics Authority yesterday started an investigation of the financial condition of domestic airmail carriers, which will lead to its fixing airmail rates without competitive bidding.

The study will be the first made of the financial condition of airlines. From information received the authority will establish a uniform basis for fixing rates.

"We are expecting a petition from airlines for an increase in the rates," Chairman Edward J. Noble explained last night. "Competitive bids have led to unprofitable prices. This has led to practices which affect safety of the airlines.

Business Tide Rising, Bank Reports Show

Industrial Output Reaches Highest Level Since Last December.

A surging undercurrent of business and industrial strength was revealed yesterday by reports on basic activities, which strongly portend that autumn will bring more prosperous conditions.

Quickly reflected in security and commodity exchanges was the confidence engendered by reports of mounting production, rising imports and increased national income.

Raw materials imported by the United States in July increased $5,000,000 over those in June, to $43,236,000, the Commerce Department reported. Although this was substantially below the like figure for 1937, the increased imports of hides, raw wool, jute, furs, raw silk

Police to Guard Pedestrians At Crossings in Safety Drive

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Washington motorists who ignore rules of safe driving may expect no mercy from police under special instructions issued yesterday by Maj. Ernest W. Brown.

Calling members of his high command to a three-hour conference at Police Headquarters, Maj. Brown laid down rigid orders for enforcement of traffic regulations—especially those governing the time-worn conflict between pedestrians and motorists.

"We can't control the pedestrians by law," said Brown, "but we can provide a degree of protection by enforcing right-of-way rules against drivers at crosswalks.

The firm of Frank R. Jelleff, operating six light delivery trucks, was added yesterday to the growing list of local merchants who have agreed to support The Washington Post-Junior Board of Commerce permanent safety program.

Carl T. Knapp, comptroller, said all Jelleff drivers would be instructed in safe driving practices and The Post-Junior Board safety emblem would be displayed on the company's vehicles. The emblems will be ready for distribution by the end of this week.

Stressing the importance of safeguarding pedestrians—and at the same time warning them of dangerous practices—Maj. Brown pointed out that walkers are entitled to the right of way at all crosswalks. At intersections controlled by signal lights, the men were instructed to see that motorists traveling on proper signals were granted the right of way privilege.

"We are primarily interested, however, in safeguarding the children during remaining weeks of the school vacation," Maj. Brown told his commanding officers. "The men will give special attention to these

HinesLinked With Schultz In 'Surprise'

Stable Owner Appears at End of Day, Points Out Defendant.

Swears Gangster and Tammany Boss Were Together in 1935.

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, Aug. 24.—James J. Hines, Tammany district leader, was a companion of Dutch Schultz, in Fairfield, Conn., in May, 1935, Dudley Brothwell, proprietor of a Fairfield Riding Academy, testified today in Supreme Court, where Hines is on trial on a charge of conspiring to protect Schultz's policy racket from the police and city courts.

Brothwell was a surprise witness, placed on the stand by District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey at the end of a long day during which Lloyd Paul Stryker, chief defense counsel, battered away in cross-examination against George Weinberg, gangster and principal accuser of Hines to date. Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand Pecora joined with Stryker in questioning the shifty former convict, who has told of paying Hines protection money and brought in the names of two magistrates and former District Attorney William C. Dodge as tools of the defendant.

Weinberg Wriggles.

Beneath their questioning Weinberg wriggled and admitted several discrepancies between stories concerning the alleged conspiracy which he told the grand jury which brought the indictment and his testimony during the trial. But in the main he stuck to his guns, and the great body of his testimony had entered the record unchallenged when he stepped from the stand.

Dewey then brought in Brothwell, an immacuately dressed little man. He told the court that Schultz, his bodyguard, "Lulu" Rosenkrantz, and "a lady" were customers of his riding academy in the spring of 1935, and that Schultz kept a horse there named Sun Tan.

One Sunday of that year, he said, Schultz came to the academy with a big, handsome, gray-haired man and two ladies, and he noticed Schultz's visitor particularly because of his size and careful dress. Asked if he could pick the man out of the courtroom, Brothwell rose from his chair and looked all over the crowd. His gaze rested first for a long minute on Justice Pecora. He scanned the jury and he scanned the crowd.

Points Straight at Hines.

As his gaze dropped upon Hines, seated at the head of his counsel table, he pointed straight at him. "That gentleman right there," he said. At the direction of District Attorney Dewey he stepped down from the witness chair, walked to

U.S. Steel King's Son Is Dead in London Mystery

London, Aug. 25 (AP).—Scotland Yard detectives and local police were trying tonight to clarify the mystery death of Stiles E. Tuttle, polo-playing son of an American steel magnate.

The body of the 27-year-old man, a new, double-barreled shotgun at its side, was found by boys in a Kent wood yesterday.

(E. C. Tuttle, chairman of the board of the Rustless Iron and Steel Corporation, of Baltimore, telephoned his secretary at Garrison, Md., today he had identified the body as that of his son. The father, who had been at Le Touquet, France, and went to England by airplane, expressed a belief that his son had been killed in a hunting accident.)

The day before the body was found Tuttle bought a sporting gun and a box of cartridges at a London store. The salesman said that at that time he seemed "quite normal."

Miami, Aug. 25 (U.P.).—A hurricane which lashed Cozumel Island with winds of 75 miles an hour or higher, disrupted communications with the tiny dot of land off the Yucatan coast late today.

Caution was advised in northern Yucatan and the southern and central Gulf of Mexico for the next 24 to 36 hours.

Guard Tells Of Horror in Jail Deaths

'Higher-Ups' Reported Named in Warrants Based on Story.

Roasting of 4 Convicts Prompts Inquiry by State.

By the United Press.

Philadelphia, Aug. 8.—For four hours today, Coroner Charles H. Hersch, Assistant District Attorney John A. Boyle and State Welfare Secretary Charles I. Engard questioned Francis Smith, one of two prison guards charged with homicide in connection with the fatal "bakings" and the near suffocation of 21 other inmates.

Emerging from the interview, Boyle said tersely:

"We got from Smith very valuable information which we intend to pursue further."

Hersch said earlier "there may be more than guards involved in the deaths" and intimated he had eight more warrants for service on guards and "higher-ups." He said any further action would come tomorrow.

Hersch refused to answer queries or identify persons who may have been involved by Smith, declaring "all that is evidence and will be revealed at the proper time."

Hersch then left for Philadelphia County prison to observe simulated conditions in the prison's isolation cellblock where the four hunger-striking convicts were "roasted."

He emerged several hours later without making any arrests and announced he would wait several days until outside temperatures approximated the conditions under which four men died while steam pipes poured heat into the crowded cells. It was "too cold" to simulate conditions, said Hersch.

Immediately after Hersch entered the prison the force of day guards, marching toward the gates, was halted and returned to the Administration Building for questioning.

Hersch also discloses results of autopsies performed on the bodies by Coroner's Physician Dr. Martin P. Crane. He said the men were subjected to heat so intense their hearts shrank to half normal size. Other vital organs were similarly dried out, he said.

Other Felons "Protected."

Mexico Must Pay U.S. For Seized Lands or Arbitrate, Hull Says

Secretary Cites Years of Delay, Demands Quick Action.

By Robert C. Albright.

In a strong demand for arbitration or prompt payment for expropriated American farm lands in Mexico, Secretary of State Hull yesterday declared the Mexican government is violating international law in championing a policy of "bald confiscation."

Hull replied to Mexico's refusal to arbitrate $10,132,388 in American claims in a note to Mexican Ambassador Don Francisco Castillo Najera. He reiterated his request for impartial arbitration as "the policy required by good neighborliness."

In plain, unequivocal terms, Hull insisted on reconsideration of the Mexican position with a firmness reminiscent of World War exchanges. It was his second note to Mexico on the expropriated properties. Mexico had rejected his first request on the grounds that no international rule required compensation for expropriations of a "general and impersonal character."

Oil Not Mentioned.

Again, Hull made no reference to the $200,000,000 in expropriated American oil properties in Mexico. Of that, this Government has yet made no issue, although Great Britain recalled her minister from Mexico City when Mexico refused prompt payment for properties seized. He confined his note to American farm lands taken since 1927, for which owners have received no payment or assurance of redress.

"The policy of expropriation of these lands without any payment as required by law and equity and justice, places this Government in a situation where it must either assert and maintain with all vigor the doctrine of just compensation, or else acquiesce to the repudiation and abolition of that doctrine," Hull informed the Mexican Ambassador.

"Obviously, it cannot adopt the latter course. To do so would make it a party to an undermining of the integrity which would characterize the normal relations between all nations and their peoples."

"Confiscation."

Specifically, he said, Mexico is proposing to replace the role of just compensation by the rule of confiscation.

"Adoption by the nations of the world of any such theory as that would result in the immediate breakdown of confidence and trust between nations," Hull said, "and in such progressive deterioration of international economic and commercial relations as would imperil the very foundation of modern civilization."

Hull said the Mexican government in refusing to arbitrate has disregarded the universally recognized principles of international law and that its failure to make adequate, prompt and effective payment for properties expropriated constitute the breach of international obligation.

He expressed surprise and "profound regret" at the Mexican position. Declaring it the first occasion in the history of the Western Hemisphere that such a theory has been seriously advanced, he called it "alien" to this continent.

Maryland Fight Urged.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Hyde Park, Aug. 25.—The belief that President Roosevelt will go into Maryland for the political scalp of Senator Tydings grew tonight as Postmaster General Farley lined up with the New Deal's ardent left-wing purgers in urging direct intervention.

Farley came here today to review with the President "the whole situation," as he put it, "in every State where the New Deal is an issue." What advice he gave with respect to other primaries in which the "purge" is being pushed was not learned. Farley had planned to meet correspondents after talking with the President, but tonight word came from the Summer White House that he had decided to stay overnight.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

JAMES A. FARLEY.

Farley made it clear that he intended to encourage the proposed foray into Maryland. He said he thought the President should tell the Maryland voters what the New Deal had given them in the way of social legislation and Federal benefits of one kind and another and then analyze Tydings' voting record. It would be an easy matter, he argued, to show that the Maryland Senator not only had not supported but had obstructed every New Deal measure from which the Maryland voters had benefited.

The Postmaster General did not venture any comment on the New Deal's efforts to defeat Senator George in Georgia and Senator Smith in South Carolina. He declined also to indicate whether he favored or opposed presidential aid if Senator Lee decided to run as a New Deal independent against Representative Clark, vic-

PWA Assigns $1,600,000 to District's Jail

Funds Will Be Used to Enlarge and Renovate Old Building.

A four-year drive by Federal and District leaders to eliminate overcrowded and unhealthy conditions at the District Jail was ended yesterday when the Public Works Administration announced $1,600,000 would be made available for enlarging and improving the present 62-year-old structure.

A target of severe criticism for many years, the District Jail at one time or another has been described as "appalling, inadequate and antiquated" by Mrs. Roosevelt, Attorney General Cummings, Senator Capper and a host of others.

Ray Huff, superintendent of the District's penal institutions, said plans call for practically a new jail on the present site. Four new cell blocks will be built as part of the program, which will make it possible for each inmate to have a cell to himself, Huff said.

When the jail was built in 1876, it was designed to accommodate 500 prisoners. Last year the average

Treaty, Opening Dominions to American Wheat, Ready for Signing.

Early conclusion of the Anglo-American reciprocal trade agreement was indicated here yesterday in reliable British and American quarters.

Although no member of either delegation would hazard a guess on the actual date of signing, it was said to be a matter only of days or weeks rather than months, as hitherto supposed.

Although precise percentages on some tariff items remained to be set, it was apparent negotiations that have gone on since February were nearing an end and final minor concessions on both sides would conclude the agreement.

Wheat Important Concern.

Once full accord is reached, it was said, it would take about a week to prepare the schedules for signing and release.

One of the outstanding farm concessions expected to be embodied in the treaty is an understanding

World's Biggest Field Guns Paraded by Hitler for Horthy

By the United Press.

Berlin, Aug. 25.—Reichsfuehrer Hitler sprung a military surprise today when four of "the world's greatest field guns'—huge weapons with 10-inch bores mounted on truck-trailer combinations—were paraded past Admiral Nicholas Horthy, regent of Hungary.

The guns, biggest artillery pieces seen since Germany's famous Big Bertha hammered Paris from a distance of 76 miles in the World War, were the high light of a startling display of the Reich's military might.

"I've seen such guns in naval turrets or on railway mounts, but nobody ever rolled one through the streets before," said one foreign expert.

Another added:

"This parade may have been in Horthy's honor, but it was aimed at the Czechoslovak military attache."

All agreed the enormous field guns, so massive each required five truck-trailer combinations to transport its rifle, 30-man crew and recoil apparatus, were one of the greatest military developments in years.

The barrels of the guns were at least 30 feet long.

Hitler, beaming proudly on his new weapons as he stood at Admiral Horthy's side in a reviewing stand against the imposing facade of the Charlottenburg College, had set the stage well for their unveiling.

More than 61,000 troops, fresh from summer war maneuvers, paraded in Germany's biggest military show since the World War.

German war office officials refused to discuss the new gun's mechanism, but military attaches in Berlin believed it could be assembled within 24 hours. It has a range of about 17 miles, making it highly effective against railroad heads, communication lines and fortifications.

Tydings Calls Senate Race 3-Man Fight

Compares Capital Aid to Referee Joining in Boxing Match.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 25.—Senator Millard E. Tydings compared his re-election contest against New Dealer David J. Lewis with a prize fight tonight, describing President Roosevelt as a third fighter in the ring.

Addressing a rally of about 1,000 South Baltimore Democrats, Maryland's senior Senator asserted the "fight" started "with both of us in the ring, ready to battle it out."

"The next thing we hear," he said, "he (Lewis) was asking outsiders to come in. He found the fight wasn't going so well as he anticipated and he calls on Joe Louis to help him out."

Lost Control of Himself.

Tydings said the issue centered around the fact "that you people are the masters of the Government—not its servants."

The yacht basin built in front of Senator Tydings' house with WPA funds provided new ammunition tonight for Representative Lewis.

Declaring Senator Tydings had "lost control of himself" in "branding as false almost everything I had said about him," The New-Deal blessed candidate for the Democratic nomination to the Senate said in a speech prepared for the Park Heights Democratic Club that the Governmental agency provided $24,000 "for the yacht basin and the improvement of the Tydings property."

Representative Lewis cited the Senator for "insincerity," on grounds Tydings obtained loans from various New Deal agencies while fighting them on the floor of the Senate.

Lewis reiterated claims Tydings borrowed money from the Home Owners Loan Corporation, and the Farm Credit Administration, and had "profited" by a WPA road built to his home near Havre de Grace.

Opposed Black.

In another speech, Tydings told an international colored organization today, amid loud applause, that he had opposed appointment of Justice Hugo L. Black to the Supreme Court because of Black's "fraternal and political connections."

Addressing the Improved Benevolent Protective Order of Elks of the World, holding convention here, he pointed out he and the Justice had worked together on important Senate committees.

The school lunch project, under which more than 130,000,000 noonday meals have been served to children in 10,000 public schools in 45 States, the District of Columbia and New York City, employes 15,129 persons.

The Political Arena

South Carolina to Vote Tuesday After Unique Campaign for Senatorial Nomination.

By the Associated Press.

Newberry, S. C.—South Carolinians have survived with aplomb, dignity and high spirits 40-odd days of campaigning in which three senatorial candidates have taken all the tongue lashing they could give each other.

SEN. SMITH.

The style of campaigning is peculiar to South Carolina.

Senator Smith takes the platform and states his case. He cites his record, and asks for support.

Edgar A. Brown, State Senator, takes the same floor and tells the same audience he thinks he would make a better United States Senator than Smith.

Gov. Johnson then tells why neither would make a good Senator, but Johnson would.

This happened in every county in the State.

Good humor pervaded the meetings. Each candidate had a polite hearing.

Inquiry Hears Utility Favored Friendly Paper

Ads Taken Out of Daily That Favored TVA, Committee Told.

By the Associated Press.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Aug. 25.—The Congressional committee investigating the TVA wound up hearings here today after testimony that power company representatives tried to dissuade farmers from signing up for TVA power by telling them there was a "bunch of Yankees behind it" and lines would never be built.

Committeemen also heard testimony designed to show that:

The Tennessee Electric Power Co. shifted its advertising from a newspaper favoring TVA and public power to a new competing newspaper opposed to the public power program.

The Municipal Electric Power Board, erecting a distribution system duplicating that of the local company, is willing to negotiate immediately to buy out the utility's Chattanooga system but will not wait on a possible State-wide project for public acquisition of the company's facilities.

After three days of hearings here, in which Francis Biddle, committee counsel, sought to show the efforts of power interests to hamper public power by propaganda, influencing voters and other means, the Congressmen and Senators left for Knoxville, where investigation will continue tomorrow.

John C. Costello, vice president of Tennessee Power, was questioned by Biddle in his effort to show the company had "subsidized newspapers."

Costello was asked for annual advertising figures since 1934. They showed the company virtually discontinued advertising in the Chattanooga News, a vigorous advocate of public power, and that after the Chattanooga Free Press started as a competitor of the News in 1936, the utility became a heavy advertiser in that paper, which opposed the city power plan.

Costello said the company had an advertising contract with the News which expired just before the municipal referendum in 1935, when the city voted for municipal power. He said he didn't renew the contract because he heard the paper's circulation was declining and he thought the rate of $1.01 an inch was too much.

Board Studies Social Security For Farm Help

Hopes to Extend Benefits to Domestics, Others Not Covered Now.

By the Associated Press.

The Social Security Board is nearing completion of a three-month study which may result in extension of Federal old-age insurance to 16,000,000 farm hands, hired girls and other wage earners now excluded from the insurance system.

A report to the board's advisory council is due September 15.

Eventual expansion of the social security law to take in all who work for wages has been the goal of leading social security advocates since Congress passed the present statute three years ago.

Due largely to unsolved problems of administration, the act's old-age insurance provisions were limited to employes of industrial and commercial concerns.

On the law's third birthday, August 15, President Roosevelt called for expansion.

"What we are doing is good," he said in a radio address. "But it is not good enough. To be truly national, a social security program must include all those who need its protections. Today many of our citizens are still excluded from old-age insurance and unemployment compensation because of the nature of their employment. This must be set aright; and it will be."

For weeks prior to the President's address, board experts had been trying to work out some system of collecting old-age insurance contributions from farm laborers, domestic servants and casual workers—and their employers. Innumerable problems arose, such as the frequent shifting of workers from one job to another; the high proportion of employes to employers, often a one-to-one ratio; and the lack of business and record-keeping facilities of farmers and housewives.

Establishment of a stamp system similar to England's has been suggested as one way of administering old-age insurance for farm, casual and domestic help. Unemployment stamps are purchased at British postoffices each payday and affixed to the employes' unemployment insurance books. The money from the sale of the stamps goes into the government's unemployment fund.

On the basis of 1930 census figures, the board estimates there are 646,294 self-employed workers. The latter group includes farmers and fishermen.

Senators Study 'Shakedown' to Elect McAdoo

2 Agents Due Here Today to Report to Sheppard on Coast Race.

By the United Press.

The Senate Campaign Investigating Committee yesterday announced it would study reports today or tomorrow on the turbulent California Democratic campaign, in which it was charged that Federal jobholders were "shaken down" on behalf of the candidacy of Senator McAdoo.

Chairman Sheppard (Democrat), Texas, said two committee agents were scheduled to arrive here from California today to make their reports prior to next Tuesday's primary. Re-election of the 75-year-old New Deal Senator was requested by President Roosevelt in his recent West Coast visit.

Action on the agents' report will be decided at a meeting with Senators Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, and White (Republican), Maine, either in the Capital or in some New England city, Sheppard said.

5 Per Cent "Shakedown" Charged.

He said he did not know what the report contained but felt that it should be made public before the primary, if possible. James W. Mellen, of Los Angeles, Jeffersonian Democratic opponent of McAdoo, had charged that Federal officeholders "are being shaken down for 5 per cent of their salaries to re-elect McAdoo."

McAdoo is the favored candidate in the race. He is opposed by a handful of rivals who, with the exception of Mellen, swear allegiance to New Deal objectives. Shortly after the Mellen allegations were made public McAdoo charged that "these statements emanate from desperate men who do not hesitate to resort to slander and libel to gain their ends." He invited Sheppard's committee to inquire.

Mellen brought to the committee's attention "charges of irregularities by McAdoo and his old law firm in connection with Federal projects" and the "strange association of McAdoo and alleged lobbyists on the branch banking bill."

Denies Klan Tie.

The campaign has been particularly bitter, featuring several personal attacks on McAdoo, the latest of which was that he once was a member of the Ku Klux Klan. McAdoo flatly denied this.

Earlier Sheppard conferred with David Lasser, president of the Workers Alliance, regarding the propriety of the organization's drive for a $50,000 political slush fund among WPA employes. The two arrived at no agreement. Lasser said that the alliance would go ahead with its plans to raise the fund. Sheppard contended that the move appeared to be a "connivance at the violation of the spirit of the law."

Previously Sheppard has maintained that contributions from WPA employes is a violation of the Federal criminal code which prohibits any person receiving compensation from the U. S. Treasury from lending financial aid to a political candidate. This view is opposed by WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins, who said after a recent conference with Mr. Roosevelt at Hyde Park, N. Y., that he believed campaign contributions by WPA workers to be legal but felt that the money could be spent better for food, clothing and shelter.

Sheppard also announced that the Treasury Department had promised his committee a prompt investigation into charges of political activity by Internal Revenue employes in the Arkansas Democratic primary, in which Senator Caraway won renomination.

Miss McConnell Heads Child Unit Under Wage Law

By the Associated Press.

Beatrice McConnell is slated for the key job when Miss Katharine Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau, sets up a staff for regulating children's employment under the wage-hour act.

Miss McConnell, as head of the industrial division of the bureau, has been checking up on child labor for the last three years. She has studied occupational hazards, assisted in drafting standards for State laws and served the States in an advisory way.

While a college student she spent her summers getting a practical idea of labor problems. For $12 a week she watched machines in a hosiery factory. Later she worked in a Milwaukee candy factory and in a clothing plant.

Lewis' Proposal For Auto Peace Before Martin

U. A. W. President to Give Board Plan Accepted by His Foes.

By the United Press.

John L. Lewis last night put before Homer Martin, United Automobile Workers Union president, a permanent peace program which he said already was approved by Martin's opponents in the U. A. W.

Martin, who failed to keep an appointment for additional conferences with Lewis at 3:30 p. m., sent word that he would refer the proposal to the U. A. W. executive board, where he has a majority, "as soon as possible."

The C. I. O. chairman's "memorandum of agreement" provided for:

Reinstatement of three expelled vice presidents, Ed Hall, Wyndham Mortimer and Richard T. Frankensteen; one suspended vice president, Walter N. Wells and the expelled secretary-treasurer, George F. Addes.

Referring all future disputes and disagreements to the C. I. O. executive officers for settlement.

Reaffirmation by the officers of their desire to adhere to the "treaty" of May, 1938.

Maintenance of the status quo from now until the August, 1939, convention at Toledo, and an agreement that until then "none of the officers or their representatives shall discuss matters in local unions or mass meetings that involve appeals to be decided by such convention."

Lewis sat with C. I. O. Vice Chairman Philip Murray, General Counsel Lee Pressman, Director John Brophy and Lieut. Gov. Thomas Kennedy of Pennsylvania as he made public the peace proposal which Martin failed to accept in protracted conferences all day Wednesday and yesterday.

"The representatives of the C. I. O. are confident that such a settlement would meet with the overwhelming support of the membership of the U.A.W.A.," Lewis said. "The members are primarily concerned in preserving their union as an economic instrumentality, rather than being concerned with the identity of some individual who may hold some particular office.

"I should be recalled that the controversy originated between the 24 paid officers of the union, not in the ranks of the membership, but the quarrels and the controversy of the officers now have been transferred to the local unions and the membership.

"It is the judgment of the C. I. O. that there is no justification for the continuance of the quarrel, and that the jeremiads of the controversy figures are becoming distasteful to the membership of the union, and have resulted in the dissipation of the assets of the organization."

Rail Bondholders Seek to Intervene In Chicago Strike

Chicago, Aug. 25 (AP).—H. William Ihrig, Milwaukee attorney, served notice today on counsel in the Chicago, North Shore & Milwaukee Railroad receivership case that he would appear tomorrow before Federal Judge Philip L. Sullivan with a motion to intervene in behalf of a bondholders committee.

Notice was served on Col. A. A. Sprague, receiver for the company, whose procurement of a court order authorizing him to reduce the wages of some 1,300 employes 15 per cent resulted in a strike August 16.

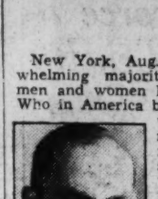

Participants in the case said they believed Ihrig would seek a modification of the court order to permit the receiver to pay the employes 85 per cent of the former wages in cash and 15 per cent in receivers' certificates.

The Gallup Poll:

Labor Act Opposed, 9 to 1, in Cross-Section Survey of Those in Who's Who.

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

New York, Aug. 25.—An overwhelming majority of eminent men and women listed in Who's Who in America believe that the three-year-old national labor relations act should be revised or repealed, according to a special cross-section survey just completed by the Institute.

GALLUP.

This expression of opinion from a group of leaders of American thought comes close on the heels of an announcement by William Green, of the A. F. of L., that President Roosevelt himself favors making some changes in the much-disputed labor act. Mr. Green made his statement after conferring with the President last week in Hyde Park.

The Institute's survey covered a cross-section of the more than 30,000 persons in Who's Who. Only one American in 4,000 is ever likely to find his name in this catalog of eminence, and the names represent a wide diversity of occupation. One-fifth are in trade, industry or business; one-fifth in education; another fifth are lawyers and clergymen, and the remainder are in such professions as medicine, science, art, publishing, engineering, etc.

The question asked by the Institute was: "Do you think the Wagner labor act should be revised, repealed or left unchanged?"

Revise	65%
Repeal	25
Leave unchanged	10

Chief among reasons given by the respondents for advocating a change is that the act is not "equitable" in its present form. According to one New Jersey clergyman who favors revision: "The Wagner act is aimed in the right direction, but it is not rounded out. Employers have rights as well as employes and have much more at stake as a rule." Another voter, a New York mining engineer, declared: "Labor has been deprived of its liberty almost more than employers. Revisions along the lines of the British act would be helpful."

Three months ago the Institute asked the general public the same question it put to persons listed in Who's Who. This study showed that among those voters who have an opinion on the labor act, the majority likewise favor its revision or repeal. A comparison of the vote of the general public and the vote of persons listed in Who's Who is shown below.

	General Public	Who's Who
Revise	43%	65%
Repeal	19	25
Leave unchanged	38	10

In a supplementary question the persons listed in Who's Who were asked: "Do you think the Wagner labor act is fair to employers? To employes?"

While sentiment was about evenly divided on whether the act is fair to employes, an overwhelming majority felt it was unfair to employers. The vote:

Fair to Employes?
Yes	52%
No	48
Fair to Employers?
Yes	20%
No	80

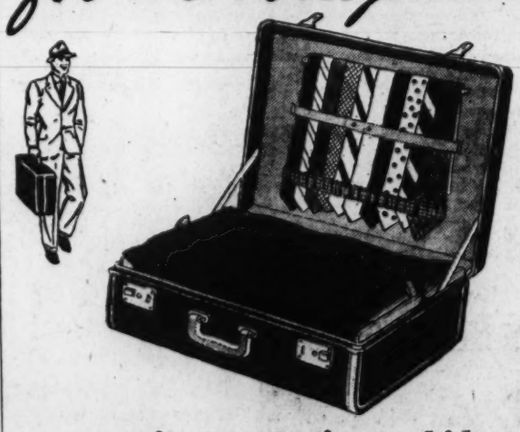

Council Meeting Tonight to Act on FallsChurchRoad

Mayor L. P. Daniel of Falls Church, Va., has called a special meeting of the town council for tonight at 8 o'clock in the auditorium of the Madison School, for final action on the proposed widening of Broad street from the Lee highway west to the corporation line.

The meeting will be open and all citizens will be given an opportunity to express views on the question. The State highway commission has offered to construct a 32-foot street 7,000 feet long with 4-foot curb and gutters on each side at a cost of $70,000, provided the town will give a 40-foot right of way through the town. This would mean the cutting of from 98 to 158 of the old trees which line the road.

The mayor is confronted with the problem of getting a quorum tonight, because two members of the council are confined in the hospital and two other members are away on vacations. There are six members on the council. It is expected one of the members will return from his vacation today, which would make the meeting possible.

A.F.L. Protests To Roosevelt Against Smith

Telegram From Green Asks President Not to Keep NLRB Member.

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 25.—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, sent a protest to President Roosevelt today against reappointment of Donald Wakefield Smith, of the National Labor Relations Board.

Acting at the direction of the federation's executive council, Green telegraphed the President in Hyde Park, N. Y., that Smith had shown bias in his decisions and had "lost the confidence of working men and women represented by the American Federation of Labor."

Smith's term on the labor board expires Saturday. A former Pennsylvania lawyer, he was appointed to the $10,000 a year post two years ago, to fill out the unexpired term of John Carmody, who quit to become Federal administrator of rural electrification.

Green said the A. F. of L. had no candidate to offer for Smith's place. "We understand," he told reporters, "that Smith is a protege of Senator Guffey (Democrat), Pensylvania."

Engine's Crew Dead in Blast, Train Runs On

St. Louisan Goes 3 Miles With Cab Vacant After Explosion.

By the Associated Press.

Xenia, Ohio, Aug. 25.—An engineer and fireman, scalded by a sudden steam blast in the locomotive of the Pennsylvania's St. Louisan, jumped or were hurled to their death today, and the fast express thundered pilotless nearly 3 miles before stopping from loss of steam.

With steam gushing from the empty engine cab, the train sped through the town of Cedarville, 6 miles east of here, and rolled to a halt at the western town limits.

Coroner H. C. Schick said railroad section hands told him they heard a "loud hissing and roar" as the St. Louisan passed, and following the train found the bodies of Engineer John L. Breen, 54, and Fireman R. B. Mitchell, 46, both of Columbus, along the right of way.

Railroad officials denied there was an explosion. The locomotive was sealed and taken to shops in Columbus, where it will be examined by safety experts of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Coroner H. C. Schick said while the men were horribly scalded, skull fractures caused death. He expressed the opinion the trainmen jumped as the live steam made an inferno of the cab. The coroner estimated the train was traveling 60 miles an hour as the men jumped.

J. F. Henry, superintendent of the railroad's Cincinnati division, said an investigation showed that the crown sheet, which divides the boiler and firebox, burst, releasing a blast of steam into the firebox and cab.

Railroad experts said such an accident was very unusual.

A substitute locomotive was obtained in Xenia and the train proceeded after an hour's delay.

Residents of Cedarville were puzzled when the train whizzed through the town without whistling at the main street crossing. At the town outskirts a quarry worker saw the limited halt—a noteworthy occurence, for the train is not scheduled to stop in Cedarville. He investigated and found the cab empty.

Passengers did not know of the tragedy in the cab until the train glided to its gentle stop.

What caused the crown sheet to burst was not learned. Railroad men said that low water in the boiler could cause it.

Engineer Breen's train orders were on his body. He had been with the railroad since 1902. Fireman Mitchell had been employed by the line since 1915.

There was some question regarding why the train traveled as far as it did after the accident. It was proceeding on a down grade, however, and some persons believed the momentum carried it through Cedarville before the loss of steam caused it to stop on a curve.

Keeping Patients Well-Fed and Happy at Gallinger

Post Staff Photos.

Meals high in calories, as shown on tray above, are in demand at Gallinger Hospital which receives many run-down and undernourished patients. Miss Eva M. Marks, chief dietitian, who must see that everyone is satisfied, is shown in lower picture studying menus. Elizabeth Henley, a student nurse, measures cream for a diabetes patient whose diet must be watched closely.

Miss Marks' Diet Brings Grins to Sick

Gallinger Food Chief Feeds 835 Customers, Staff; Cost Is 40c Daily.

Food is the thing most people are most finicky about, but Miss Eva M. Marks, who has the responsibility of feeding every patient, doctor, nurse and employe in Gallinger Hospital, still thinks it's great fun being a dietitian after a dozen years in the business.

"There are plenty of things that can—and will—get you down, if you let them," she said yesterday, taking time out from preparation of the next day's menus. "Heaven help the dietitian who doesn't keep smiling."

Even more important, though, she must keep her "customers" smiling. If an army travels on its stomach, so does a hospital patient, though he may be flat on his back. Miss Marks thinks that an appetizing tray, a menu surprise every now and then, and the serving of food promptly while it is still hot, all help no end to effect recoveries.

Her domain is a kitchen which was built to accommodate 260 patients. Rather, there are two kitchens, a large one where the regular diets are prepared and a smaller one adjoining in which the special diets originate. Yesterday there were 835 patients to feed, as well as the doctors, nurses and other personnel, but the kitchens and their equipment are just the same as they were when Miss Marks came to Gallinger in 1931.

3,300 Meals Served.

Yesterday more than 3,300 meals were prepared. Last month they totaled 108,573, of which 82,824 were consumed by patients and the remainder by personnel. During the fiscal year ended last June 30, the number of meals served was 1,286,050.

Diabetics, maternity cases, maniacs in the psychopathic ward, tuberculars, patients in isolation, children recovering from tonsillectomies—all are grist for the Marks mill.

Assistant dietitians, sleuth-like, note patients' reactions to their food at every meal. Complaints, suggestion and praise are jotted down and forwarded to Miss Marks.

For example, when whole wheat bread was placed on yesterday's lunch menu in the tuberculosis wards most of the male patients said they preferred white bread. So that's what they got for dinner last night.

Diabetes sufferers, whose diets must be rigidly supervised, are the least cranky, strange as that may seem, said Miss Marks. Tuberculosis seems to bring a craving for sweets, and their desire is satisfied, unless the patient also has diabetes, she declared.

More than 20 different kinds of special diets are served at Gallinger. The most common is the "high caloric." This is prescribed for patients in a rundown physical condition, perhaps suffering from malnutrition. Since Gallinger is a charity hospital, there is no dearth of patients who need fattening up.

Negro patients are happiest, as might be expected, when they get pork chops, ham or fried chicken. Children go especially for fancy desserts.

Right now it is costing about 40 cents a day to feed Gallinger patients. About 30 cents of that amount goes for the food itself, the remainder being accounted for by salaries in the diet kitchen, gas, electricity, laundry, etc. From April, 1937, to April, 1938, the average was about 31 cents a day, far below municipal hospitals in other large cities.

Here is the 40 cents worth eaten by patients yesterday:

Breakfast—Sliced banan, choice of cooked or cold cereal, eggs, bread and butter, coffee or milk.

Lunch—Vegetable soup, crackers, cold cuts of meat, macaroni au gratin, sliced tomatoes, cocoanut cream pudding, tea or milk.

Dinner—Roast beef, mashed potatoes, fresh string beans, bread and butter, canned apricots and cookies, tea or milk.

Fish is the piece de risistance on Fridays, of course, and Sunday is chicken day.

5 Ounces of Waste.

That Miss Marks is succeeding in pleasing the greatest number with her dishes—she is not so naive as to believe she can please everyone all the time—is indicated by the low percentage of waste. By weighing the garbage, it has been found that the average amount of leavings per patient is approximately 5 ounces.

Hospital authorities say if the food waste is 10 ounces or less, the dietitian can pat herself on the back.

Miss Marks is from Schenectady, N. Y. She received her training at Skidmore College, did her postgraduate practical work in New York City and for five years was chief dietitian at Metropolitan Hospital there before coming to Washington.

She has been at Gallinger since July, 1931, chief dietitian since October, 1934.

She is a light eater herself, though she can do justice to a full meal if it is served daintily and appetizingly. That is why she is so particular that patients' trays must look tempting and inviting.

Spouse Confesses He Slew Wife; Has Flesh to Prove It

San Francisco, Aug. 25 (U.P.).—A man identified as Raymond Hughes ran up to a traffic officer late today and shouted a wild confession to slaying and multilating his wife.

"I've just killed my wife," he cried, pulling a piece of flesh from his pocket to prove his story to Officer Arthur L. Schwerdt, who then arrested Hughes.

At an address given by Hughes, officers of the homicide squad found the nude body of a 32-year-old woman stretched across a bed. She had been slashed with a hunting knife and strangled. Across her abdomen, scribbled with an indelible pencil, were the words, "Honey, I love you."

Fla. Drowning Victim May Be Alexandrian

The body of a slender, elderly man, tentatively identified as W. W. Muir, formerly of Alexandria, was taken from a river near St. Augustine, Fla., yesterday, Sheriff E. E. Boyce told Washington police by telegram. Identification was made by guests of a Miami hotel where Muir had stayed.

Killing Brings Chicago Gang Victims to 10

Police Assert Slayers Who 'Beat' Them to Mobster 'Have Good Reason.'

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 25.—Ten gang-style killings here in as many weeks were attributed today by John L. Sullivan, chief of detectives, to a mysterious and bloody "purge" of the Chicago underworld by a mob or mobs unknown.

Paul Battaglia, 44, latest victim of the swiftly striking executioners, was found dead in a West Side alley last night. Police identified him as an associate of the notorious Genna gang in its prohibition heyday and later of the "42 gang" of automobile strippers, burglars and holdup artists.

None of the ten recent killings, all done with traditional gangland technique, has been solved.

"There's no doubt that a purge is going on," Chief Sullivan said. "We don't know who is doing it, or why. We don't know when it will stop or who the next victim will be. But we're working day and night to solve it before it gets any bloodier."

Holdups of gambling houses, muscling into rackets and "squealing" were suggested by various police authorities as possible reasons for the purge.

One theory was that mobs have held up handbooks with machine guns, collecting thousands of dollars, and that gunmen who put aside their tools after the prohibition era have been called back to deal with the robbers and their finger men.

Capt. Patrick Collins said he had been seeking Battaglia for questioning about robberies of taverns where handbooks were operated and commented, "it looks like the killers beat us to it."

"Chicago mobs have largely been broken up since prohibition," Chief Sullivan said, "and now are small and indistinct in outline.

"When they were strong we could say definitely that a man belonged to one or another. Now their activities are hidden and their form vague. There are so many leaders we can't tell who is the big shot. Fact is, I don't think there is a big shot today.

"Bugs (George) Moran told us when we questioned him about the St. Valentine's Day massacre in 1929 that 'the boys have a very good reason for everything they do.'

"That's all the answer we have to this purge."

Text of Hull's Note Telling Mexico to Pay for Lands or Arbitrate

Refusal Is Confiscation and Breach of Law, Secretary Holds.

The note from Secretary Hull, delivered to the Ambassador of Mexico, follows, in full:

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the Mexican Government's note of August 3 last delivered to the Ambassador of the United States in Mexico City, which note was intended to be a reply to my note of July 21 addressed to your excellency.

I.

In my note under reference this Government called to the attention of your excellency's Government the fact that many nationals of the United States, chiefly the owners of farms of moderate size with a claimed value of $10,132,388 which have been expropriated by the Mexican government subsequent to 1927, have not only been left without any payment for the properties so taken, but likewise without assurance that any payments would be made by the Mexican government to them within any foreseeable time. I further stated, "The taking of property without compensation is not expropriation. It is confiscation. It is no less confiscation because there may be an expressed intent to pay at some time in the future."

I said that the Government of the United States cannot admit that a foreign government may take the property of American national in disregard of the universally recognized rule of compensation under international law or admit that the rule of compensation can be nullified by any country through its own local legislation.

My Government had in mind that the doctrine of just compensation for property taken originated long in advance of international law. Beyond doubt, the question first arose when one person sought to take the property of another. Civilized society determined that common justice required that it be paid for. One nation after another decided that it was fair and reasonable, equitable and right, to accompany a taking of property by payment of just compensation. In due time the nations of the world accepted this as a sound basic rule of fair play and fair dealing. Today, it is embodied in the constitutions of most countries of the world, and of every republic of the American continent; and has been carried forward as an international doctrine in the universally recognized law of nations. There is, indeed, no mystery about international law. It is nothing more than the recognition between nations of the rules of right and fair-dealing, such as ordinarily obtain between individuals, and which are essential for friendly intercourse.

In the reply of your excellency's Government now under acknowledgment the Government of Mexico states that it maintains "that there is in international law no rule universally accepted in theory nor carried out in practice, which makes obligatory the payment of immediate compensation, nor even of deferred compensation, for expropriations of a general and impersonal character like those which Mexico has carried out for the purpose of the redistribution of the land."

Expresses United States "Regret."

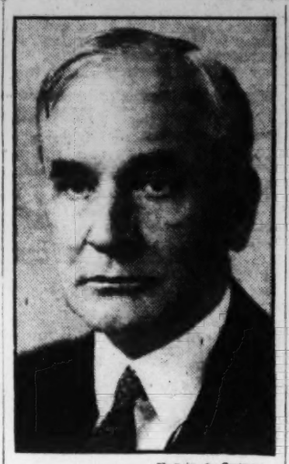

The Mexican government further states that "there does not exist in international law and principle universally accepted by countries, nor by the writers of treatises on this subject, that would render obligatory the giving of adequate compensation for expropriations of a general and impersonal character," and continues by declaring that while Mexico admits "in obedience to her own laws that she is indeed under obligation to indemnify in an adequate manner" . . . "the time and manner of such payment must be determined by her own law," and that such assertion is "based on the most authoritative opinions of writers of treatises on international law."

My Government has received this contention on the part of the Government of Mexico, I feel it necessary to state with all candor, not only with surprise, but with profound regret.

Reduced to its essential terms, the contention asserted by the Mexican government, as set forth in its reply and as evidenced by its practices in recent years, is plainly this: That any government may, on the ground that its municipal legislation so permits, or on the plea that its financial situation makes prompt and adequate compensation onerous or impossible, seize properties owned by foreigners within its jurisdiction, utilize them for whatever purposes it sees fit, and refrain from providing effective payment therefor, either at the time of seizure or at any assured time in the future.

I do not hesitate to maintain that this is the first occasion in the history of the Western Hemisphere that such a theory has been seriously advanced. In the opinion of my Government, international law and of the law of every American republic, as well as to every principle of right and justice upon which the institutions of the American republics are founded. It seems to the Government of the United States a contention alien to the history, the spirit and the ideals of democracy as practiced throughout the independent life of all the nations of this continent.

If such a policy were to be generally followed, what citizen of one republic making his living in any of the other 20 republics of the Western Hemisphere could have any assurance from one day to the next that he and his family would not be evicted from their home and bereft of all means of livelihood? Under such conditions, what guarantees or security could be offered which would induce the nationals of one country to invest savings in another country, or even to do ordinary business with the nationals of another country?

II.

The fundamental issues raised by this communication from the Mexican government are therefore, first, whether or not upiversally recognized principles of the law of nations require, in the exercise of the admitted right of all sovereign nations to expropriate private property, that such expropriation be accompanied by provision on the part of such government for adequate, effective, and prompt payment for the properties seized; second, whether any government may nullify principles of international law through contradictory municipal legislation of its obligations under universally recognized principles of international law merely because its financial or economic situation makes compliance therewith difficult.

The Government of the United States merely adverts to a self-evident fact when it notes that the applicable precedents and recognized authorities on international law support its declaration that, under every rule of law and equity, no government is entitled to expropriate private property, for whatever purpose, without provision for prompt, adequate, and effective payment therefor. In addition, clauses appearing in the constitutions of the American republics, embody the principle of just compensation. These, in themselves, are declaratory of the like principle in the law of nations.

The universal acceptance of this rule of the law of nations, which, in truth, is merely a statement of common justice and fair-dealing, does not in the view of this Government admit of any divergence of opinion. Merely as one of many examples of enlightened authoritative opinion of present times upon this subject I cite the following authority as a pertinent example.

In 1903 in the arbitration of the Selwyn case which had arisen between the governments of Great Britain and Venezuela, the umpire in the case stated. "The fundamental ground of this claim as presented is that the claimant was deprived of valuable rights, of moneys, properties, property and rights of property by an act of the government which he was powerless to prevent and for which he claims reimbursement. This act of the government may have proceeded from the highest reasons of public policy and with the largest regard for the state and its interests; but when from the necessity or policy of the government it appropriates or destroys the property or property rights of an alien it is held to make full and adequate recompense therefor."

With regard to the further fundamental issues presented in the reply of your excellency's Government the Mexican Government now advances the surprising contention that it may expropriate property and pay therefor, in so far as its economic circumstances and its local legislation permit, but that if these circumstances and legislation do not make possible the payment of compensation, it can still take the property. If this theory were sound, the safeguards which the fundamental laws of most countries and established international law have sought to provide for private property would be uttterly worthless. Governments would be free to take private property far beyond or regardless of their ability or willingness to pay, and the owners thereof would be without recourse. This, of course, would be unadulterated confiscation.

As I stated to your excellency in my note of July 21, the Government of the United States cannot admit that any government may, of its single will, whether through its municipal legislation or by pleading economic inability, abandon the recognized principle of international law requiring just compensation, whenever the purposes for which expropriation is undertaken may seem to that government desirable.

"Friend of Reform."

My Government considers that its own practice has amply demonstrated that it is the consistent friend of reform, that it has every sympathy with misfortune and need, and that it recognizes fully the necessities of the underprivileged. It cannot, however, accept the idea that these high objectives justify, or for that matter require, infringement on the law of nations or the upsetting of constitutionally recognized guarantees. The modern world furnishes many examples of nations which have effected major social reforms, under unusually difficult economic conditions, while complying with every rule of equity, fair dealing and basic law. Many governments, like the Mexican government, today face the necessity of planning, as the Mexican government says it does, for social betterment and for political, social and economic stability. Is it conceivable that in order to attain these desirable objectives it is necessary for governments to rest the entire undertaking on a policy of confiscation? Every sovereign nation is in possession of powers to regulate its internal affairs, to reorganize, when needful, its entire economic, financial and industrial structure, and to achieve social ends by methods conforming with law.

Instead of using these recognized and orderly methods, the government of Mexico in effect suggests that whenever special conditions or circumstances obtain in any one country, that country is entitled to expect all the other nations of the world to accept a change in the settled rules and principles of law, which are domestic quite as much as international, solely in order to assist the country in question to extricate itself from difficulties for which it is itself entirely responsible. Specifically, it is proposed to replace the rule of just compensation by the rule of confiscation. Adoption by the nations of the world of any such theory as that would result in the immediate breakdown of confidence and trust between nations, and in such progressive deterioration of international economic and commercial relations as would imperil the very foundations of modern civilization. Human progress would be fatally set back.

The policy of expropriation of these lands without any payment as required by law and equity and justice, places this Government in a situation where it must either assert and maintain with all vigor the doctrine of just compensation, or else acquiesce in the repudiation and abolition of that doctrine. Obviously it cannot adopt the latter course. To do so would make it a party to an undermining of the integrity which would characterize the normal relations between all nations and their peoples.

The vital interest of all governments and of all people in this question and the imperative need of all countries to maintain unimpaired the structure of common justice embodied in international as well as in basic national law, lead me, particularly in view of the warm friendship existing between the two countries, to appeal most earnestly to the Mexican government to refrain from persisting in a policy and example which, if generally pursued, will seriously jeopardize the interests of all peoples throughout the world.

III

The Mexican government rejects the proposal of the Government of the United States that there be submitted to arbitration, in the terms of the General Arbitration Treaty signed at Washington on January 5, 1929, the the following points: First, whether there has been compliance by the government of Mexico with the rule of compensation as prescribed by international law in the case of American citizens whose farms and agrarian interests in Mexico have been expropriated by the Mexican government since August 30, 1927, and second, if not, the amount of and terms under which compensation should be made by the government of Mexico.

The Mexican Government sets forth as its reasons for rejecting the proposal of the United States for arbitration, its opinion that "arbitration should be reserved, as the same Treaty of Washington establishes, for cases of irreducible differences in which the juridical principle under discussion or the act giving origin to the arbitration are of such a character that the two peoples at variance do not find any more obvious way of coming to an agreement." The Mexican Government continues by stating that, "Such is not the present case, for while it is true that Mexico does not consider that payment of an indemnification for properties which the state expropriates on grounds of public utility is an invariable and universal rule of international law, it is also true that Article 27 of her constitution ordains payment in such cases, and, therefore, the Mexican Government has never denied such obligation." "There is no subject matter," the Mexican Government continues by stating, "therefore, for the arbitration proposed." Your excellency's Government concludes by stating its opinion that, "With respect to the conditions under which the said payment should be made, arbitration is likewise unnecessary and it would, furthermore, be improper under the terms of the Treaty of Washington since the procedures of execution for the carrying out of obligations already recognized by Mexico cannot be a subject for arbitration and would have to be established in accordance with her economic conditions, which cannot but be taken into account by a friendly people, nor can that be the subject for decision of an international court, which by attempting to impose a certain economic organization upon Mexico, would give a death blow to her right to organize herself autonomously, the very basis of her sovereignty."

The Government of the United States is unable to acquiesce in the reasons so advanced for refusal to accept the proposed arbitration. It is quite true, as the Mexican government states, that Article 27 of the Mexican constitution orders payment in cases of expropriation for causes of public utility of private property by the Mexican government. I need hardly remind your excellency, however, that such payments in the cases of the American nationals under consideration have not been made. The very provisions of the Mexican constitution and of the Mexican laws referred to by the government of Mexico with such satisfaction have already been negatived in practice. They would now seem to have been abrogated in practical effect by the contention set forth in your government's last contention.

While this Government shares the view of the Mexican government that arbitration should be reserved for cases in which the two countries in conflict can find no other way of reaching an agreement, I may here appropriately quote the first paragraph of Article 1 of the Treaty of Inter-American Arbitration, which has been suggested by the United States as an appropriate vehicle for the friendly and impartial solution of our differences and which reads as follows:

"The high contracting parties bind themselves to submit to arbitration all differences of an international character which have arisen or may arise between them by virtue of a claim of right made by one against the other under treaty or otherwise, which it has not been possible to adjust by diplomacy and which are juridical in their nature by reason of being susceptible of decision by the application of the principles of law."

I find it necessary emphatically to state that, after many years of patient endeavor on the part of this Government to obtain just satisfaction for these claims without success, the Government of the United States has regretfully reached the conclusion that it is impossible to adjust them by diplomacy. Since they are obviously susceptible of decision by the application of principles of law, it believes that the proposed arbitration is the appropriate and friendly method of solution. Nor can this Government admit that the determination by arbitration of the "amount of and terms under which compensation should be made by the government of Mexico" is a matter which in any sense impairs the autonomy of Mexico. An agreement to arbitrate on the part of sovereign nations like any treaty as, for example, the Inter-American Treaty of Arbitration itself, ratified by both Mexico and the United States, is a voluntary limitation of the exercise of sovereignty by acceptance of principles of justice, fair-dealing and law. Indeed, the highest attribute of sovereignty is the power to make just such agreements. It is exactly in this manner that civilization has advanced.

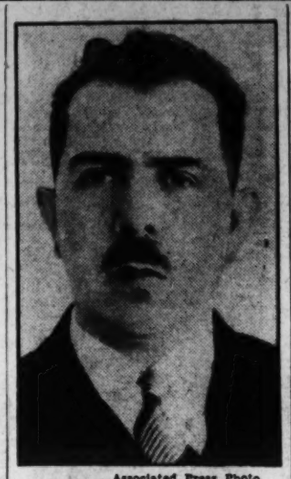

Article 1 of the Inter-American Treaty of Arbitration specifies, as questions arising between the American nations which are susceptible to the proposed arbitration: "(b) Any question of international law; (c) The existence of any fact which, if established, would constitute a breach of an international obligation."

The Government of the United States maintains that in the treatment accorded its nationals by the Government of Mexico, as set forth in my note of July 21, the Government of Mexico has disregarded the universally recognized principles of international law, and that its failure to make adequate, prompt and effective payment for properties expropriated constitutes the breach of an international obligation. It follows that the controversy which has thus arisen is not one which the Mexican government can refuse to arbitrate upon the ground that its economic situation impedes it from abiding by the principles of international law, or upon the ground that its municipal legislation provides for a different procedure. My Government, therefore, in the most friendly spirit, urges the Mexican government to reconsider the position which it has taken and to agree to submit to the proposed arbitration the questions at issue between the two governments, as formulated in my note to Your Excellency of July 21.

IV.

The Mexican Government refers to the fact that, when it undertook suspension of the payment of its agrarian debt, the measure affected equally Mexicans and foreigners. It suggests that if Mexico had paid only the latter to the exclusion of its nationals, she would have violated a rule of equity. In that connection the Mexican government refers to Article 9 of the convention signed at the Seventh Pan American Conference, which says: "The jurisdiction of states within the limits of national territory applies to all the inhabitants. Nationals and foreigners are under the same protection of the law and the national authorities and the foreigners may not claim rights other or more extensive than those of the nationals."

Your Excellency's government intimates that a demand for unequal treatment is implicit in the note of the Government of the United States, since my Government is aware that Mexico is unable to pay indemnity immediately to all of those affected by her agrarian reform and yet it demand payment to expropriated landowners who are nationals of the United States. This, it is suggested, is a claim of special privilege which no one is receiving in Mexico.

I must definitely dissent from the opinions thus expressed by the government of Mexico. The Government of the United States requests no privileged treatment for its nationals residing in Mexico. The present Government of the United States has on repeated occasions made it clear that it would under no circumstances request special or privileged treatment for its nationals in the other American republics, nor support any claim of such nationals for treatment other than that which was just, reasonable, and strictly in harmony with the generally recognized principles of international law.

The doctrine of equality of treatment, like that of just compensation, is of ancient origin. It appears in many constitutions, bills of rights and documents of international validity. The word has invariably referred to equality in lawful rights of the person and to protection in exercising such lawful rights. There is now announced by your government the astonishing theory that this treasured and cherished principle of equality, designed to protect both human and property rights, is to be invoked, not in the protection of personal rights and liberties, but as a chief ground of depriving and stripping individuals of their conceded rights. It is contended, in a word, that it is wholly justifiable to deprive an individual of his rights if all other persons are equally deprived, and if no victim is allowed to escape. In the instant case it is contended that confiscation is so justified. The proposition scarcely requires answer. In addition, it must be observed that the claimants in these expropriation cases did not seek to become creditors of the Mexican government. They were forced into that position by the act of Mexico herself.

It may be noted, in passing, that the claim here made on behalf of American nationals is, in substance, siilar to the claims which Mexican nationals have against their own Government under the Mexican constitution adverted to by Your Excellency's Government. It is, of course, the privilege of a Mexican national to decline to assert such claim, as it is the power of the Mexican government to decline to give it effect; but such action on the part of Mexico or her nationals cannot be construed to mean that American nationals are claiming any position of privilege. The statement in your Government's note to the effect that foreigners who voluntarily move to a country not their own assume, along with the advantages which they may seek to enjoy, the risks to which they may be exposed and are not entitled to better treatment than nationals of the country, presupposes the maintenance of law and order consistent with principles of international law; that is to say, when aliens are admitted into a country the country is obligated to accord them that degree of protection of life and property consistent with the standards of justice recognized by the law of nations. Actually, the question at issue raises no possible problem of special privilege. The plain question is whether American citizens owning property in Mexico shall be deprived of their properties, and, in many instances, their very livelihood, in clear disregard of their just rights. It is far from legitimate for the Mexican government to attempt to justify a policy which in essence constitutes bald confiscation by raising the issue of the wholly inapplicable doctrine of equality.

V.

The Government of Mexico, in the note under reply, suggests the existence of a number of subsidiary questions. Included in these are questions of the legality of the titles to expropriated property; and considerations of law, equity and valuation arising in individual cases, presenting the problem whether certain claims are just, in whole or in part, and what the amount of certain claims should be. Until the principle of just compensation has been recognized, these subsidiary questions need not be considered. My Government has repeatedly stated that it sought just and not unjust compensation so far as amount was concerned; and that it would support only just and not unjust claims so far as the law and equity of each claim was concerned. But since the Mexican Government has challenged the doctrine of just compensation and proposes to substitute for it, to all intents and purposes, the theory of confiscation, the merits of this fundamental issue must be determined before any others can be considered. It is beside the question to discuss the merits of any claim, or the titles or equities involved, or the facts and factors pertaining to valuation. Once the principle of just compensation is accepted, these become matters relevant to the problem of payment. Until then, their discussion is fruitless.

VI.

In concluding the note now under acknowledgment, the Mexican government invites the Government of the United States "to appoint a representative, so that together with the representative whom my government would designate, they may fix, within a brief period of time, the value of the properties affected and the manner of payment." The Mexican government states that it considers such proposal the execution in part of a "general plan for the carrying out of her obligations in this respect, both in favor of nationals and foreigners," and asserts its willingness to begin at once the discussion of the terms of this arrangement. In effect, the government of Mexico now proposes to talk about the valuation of some of the lands of American citizens seized by the Mexican government in recent years. Yet we have held conversations with regard to payment for many years without result. Seemingly, the Mexican government proposes to continue the policy of taking property without payment, while continuing discussions of past takings.

In tendering the proposal so made, is the government of Mexico prepared to agree that no further taking will take place without payment?

Can it hold out any reasonable measures of certainty that a determination of the value of the properties affected and of the manner of payment for them can be had "within a brief period of time?" Pending the reaching of an agreement between the commissioners on all of these points, will the government of Mexico set aside sufficient cash in order to assure prompt payment in accordance with the terms of the agreement so reached? Is the government of Mexico prepared to offer satisfactory commitments on these two points?

In the light of its experience in the unfruitful negotiations held with the Mexican government in recent years on these subjects, my Government believes that, unless the government of Mexico offers satisfactory commitments on these essential matters, acceptance of the suggestion of the Mexican government would merely result in discussions which would continue over a period of many years, and which would not achieve that equitable and satisfactory solution which both governments are assumed to desire. This would assuredly not be the case were resort had to arbitration.

VII.

My Government, in its desire to expedite and to facilitate a fair solution of this question in every possible and proper manner, without, however, in any way altering its position as above set forth, will be willing, should the government of Mexico refuse to agree to resort to arbitration as hereinbefore proposed, to reiterate the proposal contained in the informal communication from Undersecretary Welles to you under date of June 29. Your excellency will recall that to that communication was attached an itemized list of the claims of American property owners referred to in my note of July 21. It was then suggested that the amount of compensation, together with any subsidiary questions such as the extent of the area expropriated, be determined by agreement by two commissioners, one appointed by the government of Mexico, the other by the Government of the United States, and that, in the event of disagreement between the two commissioners regarding the amount of compensation due in any case, or of any other question necessary for a determination of value, these questions be decided by a sole arbitrator selected by the Permanent Commission at Washington provided for by the so-called Gondra Treaty, signed at Santiago, May 3, 1923, to which both our governments are parties. It was likewise suggested that in order to advance a settlement of the matter, the governments of Mexico and of the United States name immediately their respective commissioners and request the Permanent Commission to name concurrently the sole arbitrator. This Government further proposed that as an indispensable part of the act of expropriation and compensation, the government of Mexico should set aside monthly in escrow in some agreed upon depository a definite amount for the exclusive purpose of making compensation for expropriated property as and when definite determinations of value have been arrived at in each case; and that should the determinations of compensation show a reduction from the amounts now claimed, the monthly deposits would be scaled down accordingly.

Choice Offered.

If the government of Mexico considers that negotiations for a settlement of these claims have not in fact been exhausted and desired to find an equitable and friendly solution to the question as indicated in the last portion of the note of the Mexican government of August 3, the most practical evidence of the desire of the Mexican government to find a fair, friendly and impartial solution would be manifested by its willingness to accept the proposal contained in the communication of the Undersecretary of June 29, and now hereinbefore reiterated. If, on the other hand, the Mexican government is not desirous of adopting the procedure just outlined embodying safeguards to ensure payment and prevent fruitless negotiation, it would surely seem to be appropriate and fitting, and strictly within the purview of the obligation contracted by both countries under the terms of the obligation contracted by both countries under the terms of the Treaty of Inter-American Arbitration for the governments of Mexico and of the United States to submit their controversy to arbitration in the manner suggested in my note of July 21. In either such case, my Government feels justified in requesting that, during the proposed arbitration, or during the proposed settlement suggested in the communication of June 29, the Mexican government should agree that no further taking of the properties of American nationals should take place unless accompanied by arrangements for adequate, prompt, and effective payment.

In conclusion, may I say to your excellency that this Government has on repeated occasions made manifest its most sincere desire to pursue a policy of intimate and friendly co-operation with the government of Mexico because of its conviction that the interests of the two nations, as well as the interests of inter-American friendship and solidarity, would thereby be advanced. It is the hope of this Government that it may be able to continue on that course. When two neighbors like Mexico and the United States, jointly desirous of maintaining and of perfecting their friendship, find that differences arise between them which it would appear can unfortunately not be solved by direct negotiations, it is the belief of this Government that the submission of such questions as rapidly as may be possible to an impartial arbitration is the policy required by good neighborliness. I express the very earnest hope of the Government of the United States that the government of Mexico may speedily indicate its willingness to accede to one of the two alternative proposals above presented.

CIO Body Says Alien Inquirer Was Labor Spy

Non-Partisan League Says Sullivan Was Engaged in 'Subversive Activities.'

By the United Press.

Labor's Non-Partisan League, political arm of the Committee for Industrial Organization, intensified its war with the House Un-American Investigating Committee last night by charging the group's ace sleuth, Edward F. Sullivan, was formerly a "central figure in subversive activities."

Representative Dies (Democrat), Texas, committee chairman, promptly accused the league of refusing to send witnesses before his committee "to prove its case." He added that Sullivan will answer the attack "within a few days."

Largely through Sullivan's efforts the committee has heard testimony that the C. I. O. and the movie industry are "hot beds" of communism.

Call Him "Labor Spy."

The league's charge against Sullivan was transmitted to Dies by E. L. Oliver, vice president, along with voluminous data allegedly disclosing the investigator's past record and calling on the committee "to reject any witness or evidence" presented by Sullivan.

The documents included newspaper stories, photopicture copies of allegedly subversive literature and affidavits which alleged that Sullivan once worked as a "labor spy," that he openly associated with Fascist groups, and that he aided an "undercover campaign of slander" in 1936 against President Roosevelt.

"American citizens should not be exposed, in the light of the facts here adduced, to further baseless attacks from or because of Mr. Sullivan's 'investigations,'" the league said. "Moreover, it is the clear duty of the committee to review all testimony thus far introduced, to determine the motives and methods of Mr. Sullivan in its presentation, to the end that some, at least, of the grave injury done the subjects of that testimony may be counteracted."

For "Careful Study."

Admitting that he had received the report, Dies said the committee would give it "careful study."

"The league, which has an invitation to testify, must prove its case and it has thus far not appeared before the committee," Dies said. "Sullivan was employed by the committee only after he received strong endorsement from three New England Congressmen, all having fine labor records and backed by the league itself."

Dies said that the three Representatives were Arthur D. Healey, a committee member; Thomas A. Flaherty, and John W. McCormack, all Massachusetts Democrats.

"If the league really wants to be helpful, why does it not come before the committee and make those charges?" Dies demanded. "It is trying to obscure the real issue—ferreting out subversive activities—by going off on a tangent by attacking an investigator. It believes that anybody who ever worked for a detective agency is a labor spy."

Calls Colleges Hotbeds.

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 25 (AP).—Representative Starnes (Democrat), Alabama, a member of the Congressional committee investigating un-American activities, told the thirty-ninth national encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars today that Communists were active in certain American schools and colleges.

"Undoubtedly," he said, "there exists in this country the groundwork for organizations of espionage and sabotage ready to swing into action against America in case the Nation becomes involved in another war.

"Unquestionably, sit-down strikes and strife in American labor organizations were fomented by Communists and aliens in this country."

is no intention of adding to Britain's commitments.

Chamberlain told the Commons March 24 there could be no direct guarantee to Czechoslovakia nor any pledge of automatic help to France if she were involved in war owing to her treaty commitments to Czechoslovakia. In the same speech, however, the Prime Minister said: "Where peace and war are concerned, legal obligations are not alone involved, and if war broke out it would be unlikely to be confined to those who had assumed such obligations. Inexorable pressure of facts might well prove more powerful than formal pronouncement."

Callers upon Foreign Secretary Halifax today included the French Charges d'Affaires, Rober Cambon, relative of the French Ambassador of 1914 who successfully pleaded with the British to enter the war.

Ashton-Gwatkin, the man who helped to energize the Chamberlain government into action, is to fly back to Prague on Saturday to carry on with Lord Runciman.

Britain and U.S. Reach Accord On Trade Pact giving American wheat growers the same preference in British markets now allowed Canada, Australia and other dominions.

Faced with the second largest wheat crop on record, and a towering surplus, Secretary Wallace has been perfecting a plan for subsidized export of 100,000,000 bushels, and is seeking co-operation of Canada.

Aside from that development, American trade treaty negotiations have sought a modification of the so-called Ottawa agreements of affecting dominion trade with the United Kingdom, to make American farm products more easily accessible to the British market.

Abolished with the Ottawa provision would be the present requirement that Canadian wheat growers ship through Canadian ports in order to obtain the British preference, of about 6 cents a bushel. Canada, which has not benefited greatly from the provision, is said to be willing to agree.

Both the British and the new Canadian trade treaties are now in negotiation, but Secretary Hull said recently they would be along the usual parallel lines, with no definite "tie in" between the two. He said it had not been determined which would be signed first, and declined to give any intimation of the date of signing.

Britain in Friendly Mood.

In other quarters, it was further pointed out that the actual date of British-American treaty signing was unpredictable. One official close to the conferees said "it is either done now, or it is not done," but added that "nothing has been finally concluded."

When the British negotiations opened in February it was contemplated that agreement would be reached "before hit weather set in," but unforseen complications later threatened all prospect of agreement.

Desire of Great Britain to strengthen her position in the present international situation, and hopes of this Government's representatives to gain at least minor farm concessions to relieve present difficult price and surplus conditions are said to have hastened the move for an early accord.

Mexico Must Pay for Lands Or Arbitrate, Hull Warns

Hull

ater expressions of friendship, Hull reviewed the rudimentary principles of international law which he said were violated by Mexico's "surprising" contention that it can take foreign property and pay for it in its own way when economically advisable to do so.

"If this theary were sound," he said, "the safeguards which the fundamental laws of most countries and established international law have sought to provide for private property would be utterly worthless," Hull wrote.

Dispute Years Old.

"Governments would be free to take private property far beyond or regardless of their ability or willingness to pay, and the owners thereof would be without recourse. This, of course, would be unadulterated confiscation."

Hull informed the Mexican Ambassador this Government has patiently endeavored for years to justly settle the claims without success and "has regretfully reached the conclusion that it is impossible to adjust them by diplomacy."

He therefore asked the Mexican government to "reconsider" its refusal to arbitrate, or to agree to a previously proposed alternative plan for settlement by two commissioners, one named by each of the governments. Should these two disagree, he again suggested appointment of a sole arbitrator by the commission created by the so-called Gondra Treaty of 1923. Meanwhile, he asked Mexico to set aside definite amounts toward final payments each month, in escrow.

Asks New Policy.

The latter proposal, he said, was first made in an informal note by Undersecretary Welles to the Mexican ambassador on June 29. Hull said he would be willing to resort to this one alternative, in lieu of arbitration.

Regardless of the method of settlement selected, Hull called on Mexico to "agree that no further taking of the properties of American Nationals should take place unless accompanied by arrangements for adequate, prompt and effective payment."

To Mexico's projection of "subsidiary questions," including legality of titles, and individual problems of law, equity and valuation, Hull replied it was "beside the question" to discuss the merits of these.

He said flatly that "since the Mexican government has challenged the doctrine of just compensation and proposes to substitute for it, to all intents and purposes, the theory of confiscation, the merits of this fundamental issue must be determined before any others can be considered."

Denies Asking "Privilege."

He likewise rejected the Mexican plea that, since Mexico had been unable to indemnify all of its own citizens affected by her agrarian reforms, the request of the United States contemplated special privilege for its nationals.

Hull said this Government is not asking for privileged treatment, and accused Mexico of espousing "the astonishing theory that this treasured and cherished principle of equality, designed to protect both human and property rights, is to be invoked, not in the protection of personal rights and liberties, but as a chief ground of depriving and stripping individuals of their conceded rights."

Also held unsound was the Mexican claim to present immunity because of economic impoverishment. He said other nations have effected major social reforms under difficult economic conditions, while complying with rules of equity, fair dealing and basic law. While expressing sympathy with misfortune and need, Hull denied Mexico is "entitled to expect all the other nations of the world to accept a change in the settled rules and principles of law . . . solely in order to assist the country in question to extricate itself from difficulties for which it is itself entirely responsible."

Charles Chapman Dies in New York

Charles McC. Chapman, native Washingtonian and former Patent Office special examiner, died Wednesday night at his home in New York City, it was learned yesterday in a message from this wife, Mrs. Florence Chapman, to Assistant Postmaster W. M. Mooney.

A graduate of Georgetown College of law, Mr. Chapman resigned after several years' service with the Patent Office to enter law practice in New York.

Corrigan's Autograph Held for Boy Admirer

Joseph Roberts, a crippled boy, is lucky but doesn't know it.

The day Douglas Corrigan, the wrong way flier, came to town Joseph asked an American Airlines ground crew member if he could get Corrigan's autograph on Joseph's school book. After some delay the official did.

In the rush the boy disappeared, and has never returned. The book is now at the airline ticket office, 813 Fifteenth street northwest, held by Herbert Ford, local traffic manager. Ford knows the name of the book but isn't telling until it is properly identified.

JapanesePierce Hankow Lines, 'Trap' 300,000

Planes Bomb Line of Retreat Toward Chungking.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Friday), Aug. 26.—Japanese columns totaling about 150,000 men today smashed through the left wing of the southeastern defenses of China's provisional national capital in Hankow and the Japanese claimed Chinese armies totaling 300,000 men were caught in a trap.

Simultaneously Japanese planes bombed the Chinese main line of retreat to the westward and carried their attacks to Ichang, big port at the foot of the Yangtze River gorges below China's secondary provisional capital in Chungking.

It was the tenth time Ichang had been bombed. The branch of the American Evangelical Lutheran mission was damaged.

Scores Killed, Wounded.

Forty-eight bombs were dropped on the river city by 18 planes, killing or wounding scores of Chinese. Elmer Thode, of LaPorte, Ind., narrowly escaped death when a bomb demolished a house next to the mission compound and partly wrecked the mission residence in which Thode had sought refuge.

Changsha, capital of Hunan Province on the Hankow-Canton railway south of Hankow, was bombed again as part of the systematic campaign to prevent reopening of traffic on the vital munitions railway.

To the north of Hankow Japanese armies advancing on the southern end of the Peiping-Hankow Railway, north of the Chinese capital, had advanced 40 miles in 24 hours but still face strong Chinese defenses before they can cut the vital railway—only communications link between the Chinese forces in the Yangtze valley and those operating along the western end of the Lunghai railway to the northward.

In the Yellow River area, Japanese reported, Chinese armies between Changchow and Loyang, on the Lunghai railway, were retreating southward.

Hongkong, Aug. 25 (AP).—Divers made ready tonight to descend into 40 feet of swift water near Wangmoon to recover bodies from the Chinese-American-owned airliner forced down yesterday by Japanese machine-gun fire.

The large land plane, attacked by five Japanese planes on its scheduled flight from Hongkong to Wuchow and Chungking, was carrying 13 passengers and a crew of four.

Only three persons were known to have escaped alive. One of these was H. L. Woods, pilot, of Winfield, Kans., the only American aboard.

(In Shanghai a Japanese naval spokesman said the airliner was mistaken for a Chinese bombing plane. He warned that any civilian plane flying over what Japan has designated as the war area is in danger of being shot down.)

[Chinese newspapers, the United Press said, demanded the United States Government intervene, but American officials doubted there was any ground for a U. S. Government protest.—Editor's note.]

Stage Needy Heirs Of Pearl White

New York, Aug. 25 (AP).—Pearl White, pioneer thriller movie heroine who died August 4 in Paris, directed, in a will filed in Surrogate's Court today by Charles Schwartz, attorney, who was named executor, that her residuary estate be divided into ten equal parts, of which three would go to the Actors' Fund of America "or any other worthy and desirable charity that takes care of actors, as in the judgment of my executor he may deem desirable." No estimate of the size of the estate was given.

To a friend, Theodore Cozzika, of Cairo, Egypt, Miss White left her residence, 6 Avenue Henry, in Paris, "and also my jewelry, horses, autos and all other strictly personal effects in Europe."

Rural Carriers Talk Things Over

Raymond H. Combs (left), of Churchville, N. Y., president of the National Rural Letter Carriers Association, discusses convention business with S. E. Austin, of Derby, Kans., vice president of Kansas rural letter carriers.

Dividing into small "back-home" groups, delegates to the annual convention of the National Rural Letter Carriers Association met last night at scores of informal dinners, where the discussion ranged from the choice of next year's convention city to the condition of highways and crops in agricultural communities throughout the country.

Unofficially, however, it was known that the probable choice of the letter carriers for 1939 as a convention city would be Portland, Oreg.; Chicago, St. Paul, Minn., or Cincinnati, Ohio.

The entire slate of officers, headed by the president, Raymond H. Combs, is up for re-election.

Throughout yesterday afternoon the more than 1,500 delegates, who, with the Juniors, the Auxiliaries and their wives, brought the total attending the convention to about 7,000, saw the "home town" of the Government for which they work.

Hundreds journeyed down the Potomac, past historic Mount Vernon, on a specially chartered steamer.

At yesterday morning's session, J. Ed Cooper, former president of the association and superintendent of the rural mail division, confessed he had lost his speech and was unable to deliver it, so he delivered a brief, impromptu talk.

Recent legislation and administrative rules concerning retirements, transfers and the absorption of routes were described to the carriers by Frank Lee, assistant superintendent; J. L. Moneyway, personnel officer; George Emch, clerk in charge of the extension service, and Walter Irey, assistant clerk.

Walter Johnson, the famous former speedball king of the major leagues, was the main attraction as the steamship Potomac slipped her moorings yesterday afternoon.

"His presence was the biggest inducement for us to go," said Combs.

Lady letter carriers were not numerous. Among them, however, were Mrs. Anne Massey, of the Mississippi Bayou town of Bay Springs, slim, youngish mother of two grown sons.

Along one section of her route, she related, she crosses 11 bridges.

"And when the water is high, it is a little difficult," she continued, explaining that she sometimes drove 17 miles to deliver mail to houses in an area of a single mile.

Veteran of the feminine carriers was Mrs. Ruth Kenyon, of Nebraska. She is now retired, but she has attended every convention since 1903.

Test Case Dropped OnYellow-LineBan

The Commissioners' much-discussed 20-feet-from-building-line parking restriction cleared its last hurdle yesterday when the American Automobile Association dropped plans to appeal a recent test case in Police Court.

The AAA had attacked the yellow-line ban as invalid, contending the regulation failed to define a building line and that the Commissioners had exceeded their powers in promulgating the rule.

The auto club, overruled by Judge Walter J. Casey, noted an appeal. But further action was dropped when the Commissioners adopted a simplified law, defining the building line as the edge of the building and agreeing to replace the three yellow curb markings with a solid strip.

Farley Advises Roosevelt to Scalp Tydings

Roosevelt

tor in the recent Democratic primary and the Republican candidate.

It was learned, however, that reports to Democratic national headquarters from Georgia and South Carolina afford no ground for optimism with respect to the President's efforts to defeat Senators George and Smith. All the indications at this time, point the other way.

Farley already has expressed himself forcibly concerning the folly of jeopardizing Democratic success by entering independent New Dealers against regularly nominated Democrats and thus creating a party split.

Farley Pledged to Clark

For the President to back Senator Pope in Idaho would be a direct slap at Farley who has pledged his support to Clark.

From the start, Farley has supported whole-heartedly the drive to unseat Senator Tydings. The Postmaster General's dislike for the Maryland Senator dates from the 1932 Democratic Convention, when Tydings consented only reluctantly to make a seconding speech for Mr. Roosevelt.

The refusal of Senator Tydings to support the President's legislative program accentuated the estrangement.

If the President decides to go into Maryland, he probably will speak in Baltimore on Labor Day.

Farley arrived here a little after 1 o'clock and spent the whole afternoon with the President, riding around the Hyde Park estate.

Farley left Washington for a six-week tour which took him as far as Alaska just about the time the President set out for the West, and today was the first time they had seen each other since July.

O'Connor Asked to Quit.

New York, Aug. 25 (U.P.).—James H. Fay, the New Deal candidate in President Roosevelt's drive to defeat Representative O'Connor (Democrat), of New York, for renomination in next month's Democratic primaries, proposed tonight that O'Connor withdraw and run only as a Republican.

O'Connor, chairman of the powerful House Rules Committee, accused by the President of being a "traitor" to the New Deal, has filed for both Democratic and Republican party nominations.

Fay in a speech said that O'Connor, by seeking Republican support "has placed himself in a dilemma from which he cannot shake loose and the only decent and honorable thing for him to do is to withdraw from the Democratic primary."

Fay said O'Connor in 1936 was elected as a "liberal Democrat but has so completely betrayed his party that he may now be correctly described as a conservative Republican."

Hines and His Pillars of Defense

Stable Owner Points Out Hines As Schultz Companion in 1935

the defense table, and pointed once more to the defendant.

Back on the stand, he testified that Schultz on the Sunday morning in 1935 was showing Hines the horses, and he joined them, pointing out the merits of one mount as a good jumper and another as giving a good ride.

Except for the closing 15 minutes, George Weinberg was on the stand all day, parrying questions from Stryker which ranged in tone from sarcastic to indignant, and from a cooling and coaxing murmur to the stentorian shout. At one point, the lawyer accused Weinberg flatly of having stolen $330,000 from Schultz, accumulated during the period when the numbers, in his policy racket, were "fixed" according to his testimony by "Abbadabba" Berman, the lightning calculator of the racetracks.

Admits Error.

"I gave the money to Schultz," the witness protested, and that was all he would say against Stryker's repeated accusation, "You stole it."

Weinberg admitted he had changed his testimony concerning the time when he charges Hines and Schultz first met in the conspiracy to give the numbers racket political protection since he testified before the grand jury last May 24. At that time he placed the Hines-Schultz conference in March, 1932. On the stand he has said it was either late March or early April.

Stryker obtained from Dewey and read to the jury copies of correspondences between the district attorney and the Arlington Hotel in Hot Springs, Ark., which showed Hines checked out of that hotel for a homeward journey to New York on March 29, 1932. Stryker accused Weinberg of changing his testimony after he learned this date would prove him false, but Weinberg stuck to the story that he changed only because his memory improved, and insisted it improved without prodding from the prosecution staff.

Recalls Police Shifting.

Stryker also drew from the witness admissions that there was a discrepancy between his testimony before the grand jury and at the trial as to the place of that first Hines-Schultz conference he has said he attended. He located this meeting first at 19 East Ninety-eighth street, then switched to 16 East Ninety-eighth.

To the grand jury, it developed, Weinberg testified he only asked Hines' aid in the shifting of one policeman and obtained it. Stryker pointed out that during the trial he has told of Hines helping him to shift a whole squad, notably five men from the chief inspector's staff, on a single day. He also brought out that Weinberg did not mention to the grand jury, or in a statement he signed for the district attorney last May, his stories at the trial about hiring Hines' colored election district captain, "Red" Williams, and about getting the aid of "Jack" Plunkett, a henchman of Hines' in negotiations to keep the policy banks in Mount Vernon, N. Y.

Nor did he mention to the grand jury, it was brought out, his story about getting an okay from Hines, by Schultz' orders, before the gang opened up their Harlem headquarters at 351 Lenox avenue.

Lunched With Davis.

Stryker kept harping on Weinberg's association with "Dixie" Davis, during the period since the indictment, while the prosecution presumably was perfecting its case. Weinberg testified he had lunched with Davis probably five of six times in the district attorney's office, but said detectives were present at the luncheons. He named the detectives and then admitted that he also had lunched in the district attorney's office with "Big Harry" Schoenhaus.

"When did you last see Hope Dare?" Stryker asked suddenly. "In Philadelphia," the gangster answered recalling the three days there with Davis before they both were arrested.

His questioner was ironic concerning the development of new evidence, given in the trial, since Weinberg appeared before the grand jury. The gangster explained "they kept questioning him [illegible] staff of the district attorney, and he kept remembering things that had not occurred to him before he made his first statement. The statement, and his appearance before the grand jury, it developed, were dated successively May 23 and May 24, but the witness was hazy about the time which intervened between them. Since then, he said, he had been questioned some fifteen times in the district attorney's office.

Lifer Karpis Turns Interests to Fish

Cleveland, Aug. 25 (AP).—Alvin Karpis, who wasn't known as a fishing enthusiast when he was tagged the Nation's public enemy No. 1, has taken a deep interest in angling since he was sent to the island prison of Alcatraz for life.

Warden James A. Johnson of Alcatraz informed Assistant United States Attorney Wiedemann, of Cleveland, today that Karpis' request for two books, "Salt Water Fishing" and "An American Angler in Australia," has been granted.

Business Tide Rising, Reserve Reports Show

and rough diamonds were considered strong indicators that industrial production will carry its bustling pace over into the fall.

The Federal Reserve Board's weekly report showed industrial production still speeding along a trend started seven weeks ago. The seven weeks have, in such industries as steel, lumber, cement, textiles, bituminous coal, petroleum and shoes, sufficed to regain all the ground lost in the preceding seven months of recession.

Not since December, 1937, has the Reserve Board's index of industrial production been so high as the 84 per cent (of the 1923-25 average) reported for July. The July rise in the index was the first large one since the recession began to drag production from the 117 recorded last August. July showed similar rises, slight but considered symptomatic, in factory employment (75.9 to 76.4) and factory pay rolls (67.2 to 67.5). These increases not only were absolute, but were against the customary seasonal trend.

Income Improves.

That there will be purchasers for the new supply of goods was indicated by the Commerce Department's report on national income. For the first time in nearly a year the income figure showed an improvement; July income declined less than the usual seasonal amount. The Nation's income from wages, dividends and other sources was computed at $35,300,000,000 in the first seven months of 1938.

National income for the first seven months of 1937 was $39,000,000,000. Statisticians, however, figured that continued business improvement, as indicated by the rising imports and industrial production, might bring this year's total very close to the 1937 total of $69,300,000,000. That was the highest income for a year since 1929.

As the quickened industrial pace became manifest, the market reports revealed that it already was taking effect on security trading. The dollar value of sales on all registered exchanges in the United States was in July 84.9 per cent greater than for June and 25.6 per cent over July, 1937.

Stock Increase Greatest.

The greater part of the increase was in equities, which were valued in July at $1,621,364,335, a rise of 92.5 over the sale for June. Bond sales were valued at $157,689,789, which was 31.3 more than the bond sales for June.

Bank clearings for the week just past were slightly under those for the preceding week, but were only 7.3 per cent below those for the corresponding week in 1937. Experts pointed out that so slight a difference was encouraging and that it may reasonably be expected to be some months before bank clearings catch up with the accelerating industrial pace. This is because the bank transactions represent dealing in the finished products after they are placed on sale. The production and employment gains must therefore considerably precede improvement in bank reports.

Fresh capital was attracted by the improving trend. New securities worth $222,595,000 were registered with the SEC in July. This compared with $231,123,000 registered in June, and $205,389,000 registered in July, 1937.

Automotive Industry Lags.

An exception to the generally healthy trend was automobile sales. The Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce reported that the dollar volume of retail financing of new passenger automobiles showed a decrease of 60 per cent for the month of July as compared with July, 1937, and a decrease of about 64 per cent compared with July, 1936, according to preliminary estimates. As compared with June, 1938, there was a decrease of about 9 per cent.

However, rapidly increasing production indicated that automobile sales would pick up later in the year.

Stocks closed lower yesterday and on the Chicago market wheat, corn and oats all sold at higher prices. Of the 15 most active stocks, whose sales were 26.8 per cent of the total volume, 13 showed gains and only two were unchanged. None declined.

3 Beauty Winners To Dance Tuesday

Miss Dorothy Parker, "Miss Washington of 1938;" Miss Nadine Petrey, winner of Golden Mirror Beauty Contest, and Miss Toni Mann, "Miss Virginia of 1938," will sing and dance at the sixth performance of the Union Playhouse, under auspices of the Agriculture Branch of Local No. 2, Federal Employes Union, Tuesday at the Agriculture Auditorium.

The Playhouse Dramatic Group will present a one-act comedy, "Ring on Her Finger." The cast will include Arthur Sammeth, Larry Shea, Mildred Baitz and Ruth Shapiro.

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris.

First sign that summer's on the way out. The Powhatan Roof will close for the season tomorrow night. Just two more nights to dance to Steve Le Sieur's music 11 stories closer to the stars. Don't miss.

Work is speeding along on the new Powhatan cocktail room, due to be opened in the chi-chi manner about September 15.

A sneak preview of the new Hour Glass shows about an acre of mirrors, azure walls, slashes of modernist red and yellow in the decoration, also tricky murals of monkeys engaged in monkey business. It will be even larger than you'd guess from the frontage, since there are to be two H. G. floors. Informal opening next Monday, formal and gala opening on Thursday.

Anyone who knows anything about dance music knows that smart arrangements are essential. And orchestra leaders dream unhopefully of getting arrangements that are not only smart, but original and beautiful.

But Johnny Slaughter (Wardman's Metronome Room) is not limited to wishful thinking about superlative arrangements. He is given them by Fritz Maile, master music man, who also plays violin, trumpet and viola at Metronome. You haven't really heard the old "Body and Soul" or the new "The Night is Filled With Music" until you've heard the Maile arrangement. Another beauty is "Garden of the Moon," title song of the soon-to-be-released picture, as sung by Roy Kiser.

You've heard that legend about the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. That rainbow's end must be in the Rainbow Room which has been steadily registering heavier business than it did last year according to Manager Stanley Gordon of the Hamilton.

Secret: The short absence of Manager P. J. McGroary of Rainbow means that he's taken time out for a belated honeymoon, Niagara Falls and all, although he was married about a year ago.

"Lambeth Walk Night" will be celebrated at Pine Grove tomorrow night, says its up-and-coming manager, Dick Richards. There'll be several well-known dancing teachers on hand to demonstrate the "Lambeth," which is pretty easy to learn, anyhow. You should leave Pine Grove as an accomplished "Lambeth-er."

Tonight is "Spot Prize Night" at Pine Grove, offering one and all an opportunity to win some really worth while prizes.

They're thinking of putting out SRO signs at Griffith Farms Tavern on the week-ends. There's a crack Sidney Orchestra offering dance music on Saturday eves. Accordionist Charlie Bates entertains on all other nights. "Plantation style" chicken dinners, steak and seafood feasts, O'Donnell style.

Vacationing, but briefly:

Is Madrillon's orchestra leader, Johnny Shaw, rumored to be climbing around the Alleghenies. And Frank Coviello, accordionist of the Mayflower Lounge, who's suntanning at Atlantic City.

David McWilliams is king of the jitter-bugs at Glen Echo, true, but he gives us another kind of jitters by solemnly asserting that his bulldog, Jerry, is an accomplished surfboard rider. He promises a picture to prove it.

Upkeep of a dog act is something to figure in the budget. Hanna Woolford's 18 performing dachshunds (now at the Shoreham Terrace) consume 3 dozen eggs, 3 gallons of milk, 12 pounds of meat and vegetables daily. But after seeing these cuties work you'll agree that they also rate a neat portion of pate de foie gras apiece.

Dick Lamm, manager of the Lotus, thought some one was ribbing him when he received the letter arranging for "Al Norton's Revue," the extra big, extra lively, floor show offered this week. You see, our own Al Norton, Lotus emcee, is an entirely different person from revue producer Al Norton. That is, they're different but alike, because they're both good showmen.

Johnny Barnes, probably the best tap dancer ever produced in Washington (now at Bamboo Gardens) looks like Jimmy Cagney's twin when he's dancing but not a bit like the movies' tough guy when he steps off the floor. It's probably an effect of the savage earnestness Johnny puts into his stepping.

Maybe You Want a Home Near a School

Give the youngsters a break. Don't have them rushing madly up the street, dodging traffic, in order to be on time for class. Buy a home near a school. Let the children enjoy those extra minutes of play. They'll like going to school, if that school isn't too far away. The place to find that home is in the real estate section of this Sunday's Post. The complete selection includes types and prices to suit every need and taste. And the F. H. A. terms bring a new home within the reach of everyone.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

The American Federation of Government Employes yesterday answered the charge by the United Federal Workers of America that the A. F. G. E. had stepped off base when it opposed the reorganization bill and that the federation had thrown a wild ball when it congratulated "Obstructionist" John O'Connor, of New York, on his work against the bill.

In substance, the A. F. G. E. said it has no apologies to make; that the reorganization bill contained so much of evil import as to make it untenable.

"Consequently there was no option, so far as we were concerned, except to fight the bill as a whole. We did that because our membership wanted us to; and, as a result, Government employes everywhere have thus far, at least, been spared job terror and demotions. The bill contained no adequate provisions for protection of employes through appeals procedure, and even its purported aim to cover noncivil service employes under the civil service laws was so vague that it would not necessarily have achieved that purpose," it was stated.

This column is glad of opportunity to carry the A. F. G. E.'s views on the matter. But we say frankly that we entertain but little interest in the rehash of a controversy that should have ended when the reorganization bill died. But we are interested in the appended expression from the A. F. G. E., to wit:

"We are opposed to bickering among Government employe organizations. There is plenty of work to be done by any organization honestly and legitimately working for the welfare of Government employes, and we do not intend to argue with them even though we may not always agree with what they are doing. We favor gains for Government workers from whatever quarter they come."

That last sentence is the rock. It may be hard to lie on, but the will to see each other only in the light of the gains to be brought to Federal employes would certainly be encouragement for those who hope that the unions will eventually get together and work in unity for common interests.

A gentleman in the United States Geological Survey Library writes in:

"I enjoyed your notes relating to the nostalgia of the District pilgrims from the Far West. Being one of those unfortunates myself I can attest to the genuine quality of their emotions. I hail from Walla Walla, Wash., where there is lots of room to spread out and even after four years I'll be darned if I can get over feeling cramped here in the East. My suggested remedies are designed to fit different moods:

"If you want to feel real sentimental about it, hoist a few Tom Collinses and then drag out that fat album full of pictures of tall timber, snow-capped mountains and thundering rivers. Your friends are always eager to see your pictures and hear your eloquent descriptions of the scenery and the life out West. It does you good, too.

"If you want to be practical just sit down and strive to recapture your thoughts of a few years back—when you were eager to get away from the dull uneventual life in 'the sticks' and come to the Nation's Capital where all sorts of exciting things happen daily and where you could really get into the swing of life. But, I'll admit, those things are awfully hard to remember."

The gentleman's pleasant mood is appreciated. But we are getting some stern letters that won't have Western nostalgia taken lightly, and the subject is best dropped. Some of those guys who moon around here and strum "Home on the Range" on their favorite guitars might be moved to such emotional pitch as to whip out a couple if six-shooters.

A case of racial discrimination is alleged by U. F. W. A. Local 17 in the Social Security Board Operations Division, Baltimore. The issue involves five colored sorting machine operators, who, the union claims, have not been classified according to their merits. Commented Albert Benjamin, president of Local 17:

"This case of discrimination against clerks because of color is not a new problem in the Civil Service. A continuation of this practice of discrimination because race represents a serious danger to the merit system. Where discrimination is possible because of color, it is also possible because of religion, national or sectional origins or because of personal bias."

In the mail yesterday was a perfectly scandalous communication, tilted "Rules For Success In the Federal Service." Some of the "rules" our correspondent set down, as follows:

1. Don't think. Your desk chief is paid for thinking; for you to think would be a reflection on him. 2. Show no ambition. Your desk chief has long since lost his. 3. Do not study. Your desk chief has gone for the last 40 years with little education. He will resent it if you try and fit yourself for promotion. 4. Agree with your desk chief in politics. Forget all about the rules of the Civil Service Commission, and actively push the political policies of your desk chief . . ."

We gather that the gentleman doesn't like his desk chief.

"You take me out so seldom that people are beginning to suspect we're married."

If you play bridge, you can get some valuable points from Florence Osborn in "The Bridge Deck" in Sunday's Post.

A Vital Statistic: 243,434 Gallons of Perspiration at 90

Science, whose wonders it seems will never cease, now tells us how many gallons of perspiration Washingtonians shed on a hot day.

Scientists of the American Radiator Co.'s Institute of Thermal Research have come to the conclusion yesterday that at least 243,434 gallons of the stuff are exuded here each day the temperature hits 90 degrees or better.

Here is how they arrived at that terrifying figure:

When the temperature reading is 70 or less, the average adult perspires about two pints worth a day. When he exercises himself or the weather gets warmer he may shed three, four—even six pints of perspiration.

Four pints was taken as a fair average in 90-degree weather, it being recognized that children swe—pardon—perspire less than grown-ups. So the figure four was multiplied by the Capital's population, giving a product of 1,947,472 pints, or 243,434 gallons, based on the 1930 census.

Tours End Sunday.

The final tour and picnic of Washington Educational Touring Club, of the Cardozo Night High School, will be to Shenandoah National Park and Skyline drive. Special buses will leave the school at 8 a. m. Sunday.

Gibson's goes down Easily!

Gibson's has been a famous name in the distilling world for more than a hundred years—famous, above all, for its smoothness. Highball, cocktail, or straight, however you take it, Gibson's is easy to take. Try the superb smoothness of this bottled in bond favorite. Just say:

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Studio Puts on a False Face For Comedy of Picture-Making

'Boy Meets Girl' Shows Warner Brothers Burbank Plant in Operation Under Bogus Label; Scene Thefts; Alice Faye to Visit; Notes of the Theater.

THEY must have had a lot of fun making "Boy Meets Girl," the Spewacks' own film adaptation of their stage hit, opening today on the screen at the Earle.

At least, that is the impression conveyed by an unspooling of the story of the two mad wags who almost disrupted one of Hollywood's major studios and there would seem to be a substantial underlying reason why everybody concerned in the making of the hilarious farce should have had a whale of a time. It was strictly a "home lot" field day, from start to finish.

BELL.

The whole purpose of the story is to have fun revealing what lunatic antics sometimes intrude themselves into the fashioning of a film play. The studio background needs must be authentic. The one in "Boy Meets Girl" is. It is the actual Warner Brothers plant at Burbank, Calif.

On the screen, of course, it is made to appear that the spectator is viewing a huge set, representing the Royal Studios. That was accomplished by the electricians and painters, who stuck a big "Royal Studios" sign up over the entrance and redaubed a few company trucks with the "Royal" label. This change of name was the only alteration made in the actual, permanent Burbank film factory of the Freres Warner. That is to say, it was the only deviation from fact but one. When the action called for the heaving of a large rock through the office window of Mr. C. Elliott Friday—the man all the other producers hate because he is the only one that ever went to college—not an executive on the lot could be found who would permit this violent desecration of his own sacred precincts. So Director Lloyd Bacon had to build a set on one of the sound stages for this bit of willful property destruction.

One relentless realist objected to one other scene while the picture was being made. When Dick Foran, the "great Western star," rides up to the real Warner studio gate, en route to his dressing-room, it was the contention of this acute logician that the watchman shouldn't have recognized him or let him in short of a full hour's wrangle!

But don't let that "Royal Studios" business fool you. It really is the Warner Brothers'.

Incidentally, there have been numerous allusions to Marie Wilson, the former "bit" and minor role player, who, of a sudden, emerges as a remarkably deft comedienne, as "the girl who steals 'Boy Meets Girl' from Jimmy Cagney and Pat O'Brien." There are two sides and a bit of chivalry involved in all this. It is pretty generally conceded, I think, that Jimmy and Pat dumped more than one scene right into Miss Wilson's lap. Accused of it, all they had to say was, "Give her scenes? You don't have to give her scenes. She takes them right away from you. We haven't a chance when she's on the set." Miss Wilson offers this in rebuttal: "They knew this was my first big chance and they weren't going to let me throw it away, if they could help it. They gave me the best of every scene we were in together. If Director Lloyd Bacon had let them, they would have kept their backs to the camera."

Naturally, you "pays your money and you takes your cherce," but Jimmy and Pat—despite their hard-boiled screen roles—both are like that.

• • • •

So Alice Faye probably will bob up in town during the ensuing week, at that.

Tony Martin, popular singing leading-man of the films and star of the radio, arrived in Washington early this morning by motor car from Philadelphia, to fullfil his week's engagement as headliner of this week's bill at the Earle. The members of his 14-piece orchestra came by train in time for 8 o'clock rehearsal on the stage.

Martin, whose last screen appearance was with the Ritz Brothers and Marjorie Weaver in "Kentucky Moonshine," is momentarily awaiting the arrival of his wife, Miss Faye, from Hollywood. She will fly from the West Coast as soon as she is assured that no retakes will be necessary on the production she has just completed at Twentieth Century-Fox.

One of the vital reasons for Miss Faye's flying trip is that she is especially anxious to join her husband, who has been away from Hollywood for several weeks, to be with him over September 4, the anniversary of their marriage. So now you know.

Since its opening at the Roadside Theater last Monday night, when the pace was so slow the play seemed slightly stagnant, "Alabama" has been whipped up until about 10 minutes have been lopped off the running time of the four acts—which is as it should be. Incidentally, there seems to be something in a name, out at the Roadside. Eugene Kressin, the company's "original heavy," will return to the cast to assume the title role in "Eugene Aram," the final production of the season. And another thing. aul Messick, who scored in the George M. Cohan role in "The Tavern," out at the Roadside last week and week before, will be importantly cast with Adelaide Hibbard in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," at Panjandrum Cochran's Olney Theater next week.

The Theater Guild announces that "Dame Nature," which has been adapted from the French of Andre Birabeau by Patricia Collinge, will be the first production of its twenty-first subscription season.

The play has reached the rehearsal stage and will open in New York on September 26, in a theater still to be selected. Jessie Royce Landis, Montgomery Clift and Lois Hall will head the cast, under the direction of Worthington Minor.

It will be recalled by Washington's veteran theatergoers that "Pat" Collinge, the adapter of "Dame Nature," made her American stage debut as an ingenue with the old Columbia Theater Players.

"Carefree," costarring Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers for the first time following their professional separation for a period of 16 months, seems to have taken possession of the RKO-Keith Theater for a long stay. Their last previous joint vehicle was "Shall We Dance," presented at Keith's in May, 1937, when it also opened with night preview showings. With the circumstances of their inaugurals the same, it is interesting to learn that "Carefree," on Wednesday night, beat the preview receipts of "Shall We Dance" by several hundred dollars, and at 2:30 p. m., yesterday already was hundreds ahead of its predecessor with the prospect of running its bulge on the first full day into four figures. That's all right, too, because "Carefree" is a platinum-mounted gem of hilarious and tuneful fun, made to order for this time of the year.

• • • •

The Doug Corrigan influence has crept into the theater.

Ian Hay, well-known British author, playwright and lecturer, paid a two-day visit to New York last week with two objects in view. One was to confer with Lee Shubert relative to the cast for the road tour of his successful comedy, "Bachelor Born;" the other, to witness a performance of "On Borrowed Time," which he is to adapt for the English stage.

What's the Atlantic Ocean, anyway, when you have an errand to do?

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Aug. 25.—Warners got back some mighty funny letters on their queries sent out to Eleanor Roosevelt, Kathleen Norris, Emily Post and others, as to what constitutes an all-American girl. Should she smoke and have a steady boy friend or be locked up in a glass cage like wax flowers? On the replies, they'll base the character of "Nancy Drew," who will be played by Bonita Granville.

HEDDA HOPPER

Now, I ask you! It's a swell stunt, but we all know that to be popular a girl has to do the latest dances—I don't mean those crazy acrobatic things that only double-jointed people can get away with—she must dress prettily, and what girl of any age doesn't want as many boy friends as she can get? If she can't get them between the age of 17 and 25, she might as well resign herself to being an old maid. Drinking, no. If girls knew what boys say about them, they'd wait until they become engaged before sipping their first champagne. I don't believe girls themselves want it, but their friends do it, so why shouldn't they?

It's too hot to preach a sermon, and they didn't ask me anyway.

Twentieth Century-Fox has decided to let the public tell 'em if it wants Marlene Dietrich for Lady Esket in "The Rains Came." Personally, I think she'd be superb.

John Frederic, the hatter, says Marlene's a sensation in Europe. France is taking credit for all her clothes, which were made in America. We miss her. And the night clubs are dull without her.

Dorothy Lamour's asking to be released from her contract, is a story I'd like to go into a snip. When she arrived here three years ago, unknown and unwanted, the agents who are now trying to persuade her that she's being mismanaged, wouldn't have spoken to her—she was beneath their notice. Dorothy's promotion has been one of the marvels of this town. In spite of not being very good on the radio, they landed for her one of the best shows on the air. Not a great actress, she was given the lead in "Spawn of the North" and turns in the best performance she's ever given, thanks to Henry Hathaway, who's developed her into a real actress. Now that she's lost her head completely, the general comment is "Gone Hollywood." I'm sorry for her.

Director Harold Young's son, aged 12, is an avid chocolate almond bar consumer. Noting a paragraph on the wrapper asking for helpful hints, he wrote saying they should put in more almonds. Came back an answer—they'd been making them for years without complaints. Wrote Michael: "Gentlemen, if you can't take criticism, why ask for it?"

Cecilia Parker and Dick Baldwin are reaching the end of the matrimonial line after ten weeks.

Florence Rice, still fancy free and whole hearted, is flying East to visit her father.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, Aug. 25

LAST NIGHT, at the Stork Club, Jimmy Walker confided that Magistrate Hulon Capshaw—who was appointed by Walker and who yesterday was described as the judge who dismissed a policy case because Jimmy Hines asked him to do it—owed no political obligations toward Mr. Hines, as far as the magistrate's job was concerned. . . . Hines had no connection with Capshaw's having been elevated to the bench—nor with the elevation of Dodge and Erwin, the other two magistrates named by District Attorney Dewey as having been influenced by Hines. . . . As a matter of fact, if Hines had interceded in behalf of these men, they wouldn't have been appointed judges—because Walker and Hines didn't, and still don't, speak to each other.

• • • •

IF EVIDENCE of Dutch Schultz's activities at Bridgeport is introduced at the Hines trial, it will involve two New York social registerite ladies who were overthrilled at meeting a real gangster. . . . Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy, who is allowed $4,800 a year by the Federal Government for entertainment purposes, spent that much during the first six weeks of his tenure. The rest is being spent from his personal fortune. . . . On March 17 Jim Farley mailed a letter to James Sauter. The letter just arrived.

• • • •

FULTON OURSLER, the Macfadden editor, met a correspondent who was about to sail to Europe and who was headed for the trouble areas. . . . "Those governments have rigid censorships," the reporter suggested, "so let's arrange some sort of code message I could cable to you in case anything important breaks." . . . "That's a good idea," Oursler agreed. "We'll make the code message, 'SEND MORE CASH IMMEDIATELY.'" . . . "Yeah," the reported asked, "but suppose I really need some cash?" . . . "That," Oursler explained, "is the whole idea."

GENE FOWLER is leaving America to investigate the Fiji Islands. . . . The wives of the Hines jurors are complaining that their husbands now eat too little—because they get no exercise. The only exercise they get is a bus ride. . . . Four of the jurors have organized a barber shop quartet. . . . Eddie Dowling is ready to put up the production money to back George Jean Nathan's suggestion that Sinclair Lewis play the Jefferson role in "Rip Van Winkle." . . . Tommy Manville's newest secretary is named Betty Blum.

IN 1934 COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY'S football team played against Stanford at the Rose Bowl. Al Barabas, Columbia halfback, scored the winning touchdown by evading the hands of Keith Topping, Stanford's All-America end. . . . Topping never saw Barabas again, until last night—When he went to Toots Shor's Tavern after his bachelor's dinner. He walked across the room and patted Barabas' shoulder. . . . "What's the idea?" Al asked. . . . "Well, it took me four years," Topping replied. "This is the first time I've touched you."

DOUGLAS CORRIGAN has given his consent for a new candy to be called "Corrigan's Chuckles." . . . The Connecticut Nutmeg will have a Bucks County, Pa., section edited by George S. Kaufman, Moss Hart and Dorothy Parker. . . . George Backer, the American Labor Party candidate opposing Bruce Barton, probably will receive the Democratic indorsement. The Democratic nominee is expected to withdraw. . . .

• • • •

LAST WEEK ALBERT EINSTEIN read George S. Kaufman's magazine article, "If Einstein Went to Hollywood." . . . The article is a Hollywood satire, concerning a fictitious secretary called "Goldie," and refers to the explanation of the theory of relativity for screen consumption. . . . "I know about relativity," was Einstein's sole comment, "but I never heard of a Goldie."

LUTHER ADLER and his bride, Sylvia Sidney, who were expected to return this week, went to Paris, instead, for a honeymoon. They'll return next month. . . .

THE O'CONNELLS, of Albany, up-State Democratic chieftains, won't back Bennett for the Governorship. They prefer a New Yorker now prominent in the headlines. . . . Contrary to all reports, Dewey and his former aide, Commissioner of Investigation William Herlands, still are pals. To help preserve secrecy, Herlands subpenas to his office witnesses whose information Dewey requires for his own prosecutions.

Nazimova Now Film Consultant

Back in Hollywood and the movies, to help recreate one of the most glamorous episodes of her past—but to do it this time in a new role—today came the greatest actress of the silent screen, after an absence of 13 years.

Severing her ties with the "legitimate" stage forever, Mme. Alla Nazimova took an office in the Paramount administration building as production consultant on the picture, "Zaza," which will star Claudette Colbert, opposite Herbert Marshall, and announced the move as the first step in a plan to establish a career in the executive field of motion pictures.

During her absence from the screen, she has been starring in her own stage productions of Ibsen dramas in New York and throughout the country.

Club Invites Roosevelt to Lewis' Meeting

Montgomery Group Is Sponsoring Rockville Rally Sept. 10.

The Montgomery County Club supporting Representative Lewis for Senator yesterday invited President Roosevelt to attend an open-air meeting at Rockville September 10.

At the same time, it was announced that the club had sent a telegram to Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, commending him for inviting the President to come into the State to speak in behalf of Lewis.

The club will sponsor a meeting at Rockville tonight to which supporters of Lewis from the northern section of the county are invited. Bowie Waters, co-chairman of the Lewis-for-Senator Club, will preside.

Lewis will speak at a rally sponsored by the Club September 1, it was announced. The site has not been selected.

Mrs. Raymond Clapper resigned yesterday as chairman of the Montgomery County League of Women Voters and was succeeded by Mrs. Luke Wilson, first vice president, who will serve as chairman until the November elections.

In a letter to the executive board Mrs. Clapper said she wanted to devote her time to boosting the campaign of Representative Lewis in the county. She is co-chairman of the Lewis Booster Club.

U. S. May Bar Woman With Athlete's Foot

New York, Aug. 25 (AP).—Gynda Frumcair, 38, from Palestine, was held at Ellis Island today pending a judicial determination of whether she should be barred from the country because she has "athlete's foot."

Arriving here last month to settle a $25,000 estate left her in Hackensack, N. J., by a brother, Morris, she was detained by immigration authorities when it was found she suffered from "ringworm of the toenail." Irving Schwab, an attorney here, has started habeas corpus proceedings in her behalf.

'Roaster' in Which Four Convicts Met Death

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

This artist's drawing shows cell block at Philadelphia County Prison where four hunger-striking convicts were baked to death, precipitating investigation that it was a deliberately planned "roaster." Note that the only means of ventilation in each cell is a tiny hole at top when door into corridor is closed. The entire corridor is lined with steam radiators.

Jail

jail population, according to statistics of the Public Welfare Board, was 646, and on one occasion hit 858.

In addition, Huff said the expenditure will make possible construction of two connecting wings to the jail, a new powerhouse and a laundry. Huff estimates the cells, when completed, will accommodate 1,066 inmates.

Construction of the new additions must begin before January 1, according to the stipulations of the Public Works Administration in granting the loan.

Will Speed Plans.

District building officials said final plans will be rushed along now that the project has PWA approval.

According to preliminary plans submitted to PWA along with the request for the allotment the new cell blocks will be two stories, each with three tiers of cells. The wings connecting to the main building will be three stories high. A dormitory for women, long a cry of penal experts who have visited the jail, also is included in the set-up.

First Lady Toured Jail.

Last year Mrs. Roosevelt, accompanied by Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran, made a tour of the institution and was depressed when she made her exit.

"It's too old, too small and is dangerous because there is no segregation of first offenders or the diseased," she said.

Others who have condemned the present building include Attorney General Cummings, the Council of Social Agencies, the Board of Trade, Elwood Street, welfare director; Thomas M. Rives, superintendent of the jail; Senator Capper and the District Commissioners.

Under an appropriation authorized by Congress, work now is being completed on a new administration building and hospital. In this building will be quartered the electric chair.

Wrote to Senator.

Condemned prisoners have been electrocuted in the central mess hall, only available space for the electric chair.

Inmates of the jail have been compelled to sleep on the floor at various times because of inadequate facilities. On December 20, 1937, a total of 109 inmates slept on the floors.

Following her visit to the jail, Mrs. Roosevelt wrote to Senator Capper, relating her attitude toward the serious conditions existing at the prison.

Senator Capper made a hasty visit to the jail, after which he said:

"I'm in favor of economy in the operation of the penal institutions, but I don't think the National Capital can be picayunish about such things. It's a bad state of affairs when prisoners have to sleep on floors and when guards have to work seven days a week and eight hours a day."

Shortcomings Stressed.

In a report submitted to the Council of Social Agencies in 1936, J. A. Nolan, of the corrections committee, stated:

"Perhaps the greatest shortcoming is lack of facilities for segrating the youthful and first offenders from the oldtimers and those who have shown themselves to be of criminal mind and intent."

In one instance, it was reported nine men, all having a social disease, were cramped in one cell about the size of a modern apartment kitchette.

Yesterday's loan and grant brought to a total of $7,381,625 already assigned the District by PWA. Approximately $13,000,000 in projects await approval by PWA Administrator Ickes.

Government Workers To Play Polo on 'Bikes'

Uncle Sam, who has introduced many new things to Washington, brings bicycle polo to public attention tomorrow afternoon.

This stout game, which brings teams from the Interior Department and U. S. Housing Administration into contest, will be played at Fort Hunt, when the Interior Department Recreation Association holds its annual field day. The players wear football helmets and are refereed by a man on a bicycle. They consider that the chances of spills from bicycles are greater than from polo ponies. Otherwise, the 1,500 members of the organization will hold a bathing beauty contest.

Air Authority Opens Inquiry On Mail Rates

act the authority must make the investigation and fix the rates. We are likewise interested because the authority now has charge of safety of airlines."

In the past, the Postoffice Department has let contracts for carrying air mail after competing companies have submitted bids. In order to be low bidder some lines have slashed prices to a small fraction of a cent per mile, with the result they have lost money on the business.

The authority also adopted a temporary accounting and reporting system for air carriers which have domestic and foreign mail contracts. At the same time an investigation was ordered to prepare a simplified procedure.

Heretofore there has been no standard form, and airlines had turned in information in varying form to Government agencies handling aeronautic affairs.

Guard Reveals 'Roasting' Cell Death Details

Prison

steam pipes opposite narrow steel cell doors—were placed in "protective" custody but declined to say from whom they were being protected.

The coroner said Supt. William B. Mills would be removed "if there is any interference with my investigation on his part" although Mills was required under an old law to give Hersch temporary control of the prison during the investigation.

Secretary Engard, who announced he would return to Harrisburg tonight, said his investigators remaining here would seek to determine whether the cell block was "deliberately built as a 'roaster' for recalcitrant prisoners."

He said that should responsibility for the deaths be placed soon, he would not abandon the State's investigation into "all conditions" at the prison, "including rioting, the hunger strike and any possible brutality by guards."

Relatives of John J. Schroeder, alias Joseph Walters, one of the dead men, were en route from Pittsburgh. The bodies of the other victims, Joseph McQuade, Frank Comodeca and Harry Osborne, were claimed at the county morgue by relatives who described them as "parboiled."

The 25 prisoners in the "Klondike" were confined there during the fifth day of a riotous hunger strike against the monotony of prison fare. Mills charged they were the "ringleaders" of the uprising and "agitators" using the strike as an excuse for making trouble.

Va. Beach Mayor Pledges a 'Sane' Law Enforcement

Virginia Beach, Va., Aug. 25 (AP). This Atlantic Coast beach resort was assured today of a "sane, liberal enforcement of the law" by Mayor Roy Smith.

The statement was issued by Smith last night in connection with charges by a ministerial group that gambling was rampant at the resort. He added, "Virginia Beach shall not be a rendevous for racketeers."

Observers said last night the known gambling centers were dark and that slot machines had disappeared. However, a few operators were reported paying off in merchandise instead of money.

youngsters, assist them to and from playgrounds and admonish them against playing in the streets."

When the school term begins, uniformed policemen will visit classrooms to deliver daily talks on safety. This system of educating children is now being conducted at various city play spots.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer yesterday announced that on the center roadway of K street between Connecticut avenue and Twelfth street, parking will be prohibited at all times. Cars may park, however, on the south side of the south roadway and the north side of the north roadway—the street now being divided by two strips of parkway.

Left turns will be banned from both outer driveways at all intersections.

Messenger Injured.

A young messenger boy was injured critically yesterday in the most serious mishap on District streets in several days. John N. Scribner, 19, of 1229 O street northwest, was in Providence Hospital with internal injuries and several fractures.

His motorcycle crashed into the rear end of a truck at Third and E streets southwest, police said. The truck, according to reports, had stopped for a stop sign. Scribner was hurled from his cycle against the rear end of the truck.

The truck driver, Harry S. Hinson, 29, of 69 Seaton place northeast, was charged with driving on a suspended permit.

Hit-Run Sought.

In another accident, a hit-and-run drive left 17-year-old Saul Levinson, of 435 Newton place northwest, lying injured near Fourteenth street and Maine avenue southwest. The hit-skip motorist knocked Levinson from his bicycle and failed to stop. The youth escaped serious injury and was treated at Emergency Hospital for bruises and lacerations.

Eight-year-old James Deans, colored, of 517 Second street northeast, fell from the rear of an ice truck near his home and suffered head lacerations and a possible fracture of the pelvis. He was admitted to Casualty Hospital.

Novice Driver Killed.

Bluefield, W. Va., Aug. 25 (AP).—Lee H. Mays, 63, wealthy retired railroad man and real estate owner, was killed instantly today when an automobile he was learning to drive plunged 75 feet down an embankment at the city limits.

A Test Of His Statesmanship.

The efforts now being made by John L. Lewis to restore harmony in the dissension-ridden ranks of the United Automobile Workers of America constitute a real test of his statesmanship.

It is no easy task which the C. I. O. leader has set for himself. The bitter, unconcealed animosities within the U. A. W. A., one of the largest of the C. I. O. affiliates, will not easily be healed. Unless order and harmony can be restored within that union its rapid rise during the last few years may be followed by an equally rapid decline. Yet, with the automobile industry reviving, the general situation would seem to favor the union's expansion rather than its contraction and collapse.

John Lewis has frequently been pictured by his critics as a labor dictator. That charge must obviously be taken with a grain of salt. Over certain of the affiliates of the C. I. O., the International Garment Workers, for instance, Mr. Lewis has practically no control. On the other hand his authority over the United Mine Workers, his own union, is complete and unquestioned.

So far as the other unions associated in the C. I. O. are concerned, and the U. A. W. A. is one of them, Mr. Lewis' influence and power are the product of his prestige rather than a reflection of any arbitrary control. Indeed, the very fact that the U. A. W. A. has been so violently rent by schisms suggests that Mr. Lewis' role has thus far been one of an alarmed observer rather than that of an active participant.

This circumstance places a heavy responsibility upon him, as C. I. O. chieftain, of using his great influence to bring peace within the U. A. W. A. This responsibility he is now trying to carry out in his conferences with President Martin on the one hand, and the expelled officials of the automobile workers' union on the other. But to mediate is one thing; to dictate is another.

If the industrial type of union is to survive and flourish it can only do so by developing adequate and responsible leadership from within the ranks. This certainly has not proved true of the U. A. W. A. and because of that fact practices have been tolerated which have alienated public opinion and now threaten to undermine the union as well.

In other words, the situation now calls for the rebuilding of the structure of industrial unionism on a more solid basis, one combining a determination to advance the workers' interests with an unsleeping sense of public responsibility. This task of construction is all the harder at a time when the destructive results of bad leadership, reckless indifference to public interests and fractional feuds have begun to crop out.

The Aussies Challenge.

So it's the lads from the land of the kangaroo and the yellow dog dingo, to say nothing of the ring-tailed wallaby, who will challenge for the Davis Cup this year. Shades of Brookes and Wilding, of Gerald L. Patterson, James O. Anderson and Pat O'Hara Wood! And it scarcely seems possible, but the name of Jock Crawford must be added to this list of past greats. This year Australia will miss his searing forehands and smashing overheads. Instead it will have to pin its hopes on that veteran of 25, Adrian Quist, and his 19-year-old colleague, Bromwich—he of two-handed drive fame.

Opposing them on Labor Day week-end at Germantown will be Budge, of course, "the man with the million dollars in his racquet" which it is presumed he will proceed to collect after this season. His assistant is likewise young and unorthodox. Bobby Riggs uses only one hand but he does the unheard of in championship play—he coasts on occasion; moreover, he doesn't think much of net play. But he has lost virtually no important tournament match in his entire career, and there's no blinking that showing. Even Walter Pate had to admit the argument although Riggs, by all ordinary standards, should have had more seasoning before making his debut in international tennis.

But let Riggs win only one of his two matches and all carping will end. For that would seem to clinch the cup for the United States again. It is commonly conceded that Budge will take his two singles engagements. However, the series turns on the best three out of five matches. And the outcome of the doubles is doubtful, since Budge and Mako were beaten by Quist and Bromwich last winter and needed four sets and 44 games to down the Henkel-Metaxa combination at Wimbledon, whereas the Aussies beat the same team one-two-three.

So it's up to Riggs, apparently. It's a heavy assignment for a debutant, but he will have one assurance in the fact that he could not face fairer or friendlier enemies on any courts than the men from Down Under.

Patching The AAA.

While Secretary Wallace is properly annoyed at loose assertions that farm conditions are "back to 1932" he does not conceal his dissatisfaction with the general agricultural picture.

A drop of 18 per cent in the receipts from sale of agricultural products is recorded for July as compared with the same month last year. Farm income for 1938 is now officially foreshadowed at about $7,500,000,000, which would be 12 per cent below the 1937 figure, even though more than 70 per cent above that of 1932.

Income from wheat was off more than 40 per cent last month as compared with July, 1937. For an Administration which has promised the farmer higher prices through the control of agriculture from Washington, this is no minor disaster. In effect, the Government has taken over responsibility for prosperity on the farm. When the AAA soil conservation program and the drastic new farm act fail to check a collapse of prices, therefore, Secretary Wallace is under terrific pressure to resort to some other expedient.

If governmental subsidies for farmers can be justified at all, they certainly ought to fluctuate in accord with actual needs. But that is not the way in which the AAA has operated. Benefits were maintained at a high level when farmers were relatively prosperous. Now that hard times face some producing groups further props to support farm incomes are added to the agricultural policy. The practice of maintaining subsidies when times are good and adding new benefits when difficulties arise is one which deserves sober public contemplation.

In the present case Mr. Wallace's reply to the demand for additional aid for wheat growers is a proposed export subsidy. Announcement of his plan to force 100,000,000 bushels of wheat into the world market, with the aid of Federal funds, is expected shortly. Whatever form this scheme takes, it is likely to conflict in principle with the Administration's trade agreements program. This is designed to regularize commercial relations and to discourage the dumping operations which Mr. Wallace apparently contemplates.

A further question is whether the export-subsidy idea means that Mr. Wallace has lost faith in his own "ever-normal granary." His willingness to resort to an expedient running counter to the Administration's general policy, and to his own economic philosophy, certainly suggests that the new AAA has badly bogged down in the first year of its operation.

Still more disquieting is the implication that the AAA feels obligated to bolster up major crop prices regardless of conditions of supply and demand. The prestige of the New Deal in the farm belt is at stake. To preserve it, and to avoid the political consequences of unfilled promises, a series of temporary emergency measures is foreshadowed.

Effective regulation of agriculture implies not merely adoption of a program but also adherence to it. Acceptance of one expedient to appease a dissatisfied group is the most certain way to encourage other demands for concessions and thus break down the central program. If that course is followed, the centralized regulation of agriculture will rapidly deteriorate into an influence racket of disastrous proportions.

The Curve Is Up.

The Federal Reserve Board reports that industrial activity increased in July contrary to the usual seasonal decline, and rose somewhat further in the first three weeks in August. As a result the board's index of industrial production for July advanced to 83 per cent of the 1923-25 average—the maximum figure for the current year.

By contrast with the conditions prevailing in July a year ago, when the industrial index reached 114, business is still at very low ebb. But to the forecaster, trends are often more significant than existing conditions. Last year, for instance, when trade and production activity was at or close to peak, inventories were piling up and the miscalculations that resulted in the subsequent sharp recession were already causing anxiety.

Today the position seems to be reversed. Business is going forward from a low level of activity along many different lines. The improvement in the heavy industries is especially encouraging. For example, August activity in the steel mills was maintained at about 40 per cent of capacity compared with an average of only 35 per cent in July and a minimum rate of 26 per cent in June. Output of cement, glass and lumber also rose and pronounced increases occurred in cotton-mill output. Paralleling and reflecting the influence of this industrial pick-up, factory employment and pay rolls rose slightly in July contrary to the seasonal trend.

Estimates of numbers unemployed still remain at distressingly high levels, while the collapse in prices of many leading farm products has resulted in a shrinkage of the buying power of farmers. However, abundant crops, together with benefit payments, have kept farm income from declining as fast as farm prices, the drop for the current year being estimated at less than 13 per cent.

That business continues to expand despite these handicaps emphasizes the fact that the forces making for recovery after a severe depression are extremely powerful. Moreover, at the present time account has to be taken of the stimulus afforded by lavish Government spending and by the more optimistic attitude of the public, which encourages a revival of buying and planning for the future.

The Rust Foundation.

Two years ago, when the Rust mechanical cotton picker successfully met field tests in Mississippi, its inventors let it be known that they are as interested in the social implication of the machine as in its economic possibilities. That this was no mere gesture on their part is now demonstrated by the formation of the Rust Foundation, under which these two brothers agree to apply the bulk of their profits from the invention to improving the lot of Southern agricultural workers.

The Rust cotton-picking machine is apparently destined to have effects as startling and revolutionary as those of Eli Whitney's cotton gin. It is to be produced on a commercial scale for next year's picking season and reports are that the machine will be sold for $2,000, or less, as soon as quantity production gets under way. This price, making it available to most planters, or co-operatives, is to be considered in conjunction with the probable efficiency of the machine. Estimates are that each one will be able to do the work of as many as eighty manual laborers.

What mass production of the Rust machine is likely to mean in terms of labor displacement is terribly apparent. It threatens to sweep into the army of the unemployed whole regiments of those unskilled and generally illiterate workers who still toil in the cotton fields as did their ancestors before them. But equally obvious is the promise of this machine in cutting production costs to levels which would enlarge dwindling markets and again re-establish the threatened supremacy of American cotton.

In the long run the Rust machine, like many another remarkable invention, will doubtless create more employment than it displaces. The simple proof of this tendency is seen in the enormous growth of population in every industrialized country during the past century. And in addition to creating jobs the cotton-picking machine promises to do much toward elimination of a particularly exhausting form of deadening manual labor. None regret the progressive substitution of mechanical fueling for the degradation of the stokehold. The same will apply to the mechanical picking of cotton.

But it is far from the whole story to reach the comforting conclusion that the invention of the Rust brothers will be socially advantageous on balance. For thousands of helpless field hands the technological unemployment which it threatens constitutes a real and bitter problem. To them the immediate loss, and not the ultimate gain, of the machine will be apparent.

It is for this reason that the foundation established by the Rust brothers is of such great significance. The humane and eminently practical purpose is to insure that the invention will be "a blessing instead of a curse" to displaced labor. And to achieve that purpose a large proportion of the income from the machines is to be dedicated to the rehabilitation of those whose labor it will supplant.

Wholesale governmental intervention in behalf of the dispossessed has come about largely because the application of science to industry has been intolerably ruthless for those underprivileged who have paid so much of the cost of progress. More of the statesmanlike vision of the Rust brothers would have meant fewer problems of the type which now harass American civilization.

Juvenile Traffic Court.

It seemed as if the citizens' advisory committee on accident prevention had included every feasible idea for promoting highway safety in its 24 recommendations submitted to the District Commissioners last week. But from Indiana comes a report of a new wrinkle. In Laporte two 'teen-age boys have been designated by the mayor as judge and prosecutor of a special traffic court for juveniles. Scheduled to sit once a week, it will try youngsters apprehended by the city police for ignoring stop signs and otherwise violating the rules of the road with their bicycles.

The Indiana attorney general's office questions the legal standing of the court, doubting whether an appeal would find one of its decisions binding. Nevertheless, the court would seem a worthwhile effort. In the first place, it will be an admirable device to impress tomorrow's automobilists with the importance of observing the traffic code.

In the second place, it may tend to develop a new type of messenger and delivery boy. If those who skoot so blithely through Washington traffic can be taken as typical, this should have a marked effect on motorists' and pedestrians' tempers if not, indeed, on fatal accident statistics.

One comfort in being on a low level is that you can relax and not be afraid of slipping.

Would Flit Have Been Better?

The President And The Purge

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial "Underlying the Purge" in The Post of August 20 carries a mightily good constitutional argument. But isn't it too technical for its purpose?

The propriety of the President's interference in local primaries seems to be as much a question for the jury as the court, and it must necessarily involve all of the circumstances which comprise the existing situation. In addition to the constitutional reasons contained in your editorial, the President is now the practical distributor of some $3,000,000,000 of the people's money, taken from them by the Federal Government.

Recently, in Kentucky, the President made an urgent personal and Presidential plea for the renomination of Senator Barkley. Immediately afterwards Senator Barkley amplified that plea by reminding his constituents that through his activities, sanctioned and approved by the President, they had received millions of dollars of other peoples' money and would receive more and more of those millions if they re-elected him. The President's and the Senator's pleas taken together comprised a claim for gratitude because of the Senator's successful efforts in procuring vast sums of other peoples' money for the voters of Kentucky, coupled with a promise to continue procuring larger and larger sums.

Suppose Senator Barkley's friends had contributed a slush fund of millions of dollars for his renomination and the Senator had announced that the fund would not be distributed unless he were re-nominated, all with the public approval of the man who controlled the fund. What is the moral distinction between this supposition and what actually occurred? A very marked one. In the supposition the money belonged to the men who contributed it, and was voluntarily contributed. In the reality the money belongs to the people of the United States, and is a trust fund in the hands of the President to be paid out for the benefit of all of them, irrespective of how they might vote.

If Senator Barkley had promised his own money for votes, that would have been simple felony. And if that is so—and it is—how can a promise of the Nation's money for votes be defined? You are an editor, expert in the use and application of words; so you define it. Any definition of mine would be too lurid for so reputable and dignified a publication as The Post.

In Iowa the President's right-hand man in handing out the people's money was the active agent in an attempt to influence the voters of that State. It is a pleasure to note that the attempt failed and that one of the most hopeful signs recently blazoned before a cockeyed country was the way those horny-handed raisers of corn and hogs reacted to it.

In Georgia the voters know that the President has practical control of the distribution of the billions of dollars called the lending and spending fund. Most of them doubtless know what the President said in Kentucky and how Senator Barkley enlarged upon his statement. All of them know that money is money, and that the Administration now has billions ready for distribution. There may be souls so pure and simple that to them these facts have no bearing on the President's interference in the Georgia primaries. In sinful men like you and me, who have had experience with the perverse nature of corrupt mankind, it produces a ghastly smile.

What I have been trying to make clear is that with billions of dollars to be handed out, practically at the discretion of the President, any interference by him in the selection of nominees for the House or Senate necessarily implies a promise of benefits from the Nation's money if the voters comply with his wishes and a threat of terminating those benefits if they do not comply.

W. BISSELL THOMAS.
Washington, Aug. 20.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The excited editorials and the fulminations of the anti-New Deal commentators on the Georgia speech are a little funny. They all see in it a clear expression of the rise of the American dictator, which they all saw before the speech was made whenever the President tried to get done what his party promised the electorate.

The argument that Mr. Roosevelt is interfering with the free choice of American voters is ridiculous. Every voter in Georgia has the same degree of freedom to cast a secret ballot for Senator George that they had before. But the President has made it clear to them that Senator George is not for the New Deal in principle, and has therefore prevented a conservative from collecting the votes of liberals by pretending that he is a friend of the President's program. That clarifies the issue, but does not interfere with anyone's right to vote his own opinion.

If the President had not so spoken, Senator George would have claimed the votes of those who are for the New Deal on the ground that he has voted for most of the New Deal measures and that in the absence of any word from the leader of the party he is regarded as a useful worker for the pledges of the Democratic Party.

But why the excitement? President Roosevelt is personally popular, according to the editorials and commentators, but his New Deal is getting to be unpopular. Senator George is against the basic idea of the New Deal and is therefore the beloved of the conservatives. His specific votes on measures have little to do with the matter. Many of those votes did not represent George's opinion, but rather represented what he thought was good politics in view of his need for re-election. If he gets the votes now that the President has made clear the issue and has deprived him of the support of the New Deal, he will represent a true state of affairs and democracy will be served. If the President's words deprive him of a victory which he might have had with some New Deal votes, cast without knowledge of his opposition to the essential principles of the New Deal, that is in the interest of straight-shooting democracy.

Certainly, anyone who believes in the right of the people to be truely represented should have no fear of having them informed of the true position of a man with respect to the real issue at stake and no one is in a better position to tell them than the President, who knows Senator George and his views better than anyone else.

I think the President has done democracy a service by clarifying the issue. And if the conservatives are right that people don't want the New Deal by and large, why should they worry about George? If people do want it, what is undemocratic about informing them that they won't get it done if George can prevent it? The arguments I have read seem silly. SKEPTICAL.
Washington, Aug. 13.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At a recent press conference, President Roosevelt said, "In American politics anyone can attach himself to a party whether he believes in its program or not."

President Roosevelt is not famous for accuracy in his public statements, but he is on firm ground here. He is a man of experience in such matters. He attached himself to the Democratic Party when it was pledged to economy, budget-balancing and such reactionary principles. But whether it is generally known or not, the Democratic Party no longer supports such nonsense. There are some people who used to be Democrats, who believe in such old-fashioned nonsense, but the point is these people are no longer Democrats. Franklin Delano Roosevelt is now the Democratic Party.

He may change his mind tomorrow morning before breakfast and again tomorrow night before dinner. In that case the principles of the Democratic Party will have changed twice in one day. Many of President Roosevelt's supporters may not have been notified to change their minds—that simply means they used to be Democrats.

W. W. PHILLIPS.
Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 21.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: President Roosevelt, as the head of the new New Deal Party, claims that his astonishing "purge" of those who differ with him on matters affecting the welfare of the Nation was not attempted because they opposed his efforts to pack the Supreme Court with "yes men."

Perhaps the President thinks, with Plato, the famous Greek philosopher, that "the rulers of the State are the only persons who ought to have the privilege of practicing deception either at home or abroad; they may be allowed to do so for the good of the State."

CAPT. CHARLES H. COE.
Washington, Aug. 20.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The term purge, which is being used erroneously and vindictively by enemies to the Administration, appears to be only another name that has recently been given a very old practice. It describes a device frequently used by former Presidents by which they merely used their influence to unseat Congressmen whose habitual opposition blocked legislation that those Presidents considered necessary for a successful program.

Since President Roosevelt was re-elected by an overwhelming landslide, in which 46 of the 48 States voiced approval of his policies, it seems safe to assume that he would have the approval of a large majority in his efforts to secure a more friendly Congress by which his main objectives may be accomplished. HENRY STONER.
Yellowstone Park, Wyo., Aug. 20.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Students of Biblical lore will recall a moving incident narrated in the second book of Samuel, of how the cruel Joab murdered Amasa in foulest fashion with a thrust of a concealed sword. Moreover the assassination was done treacherously—the victim thought he was about to be kissed after Joab had taken him by the beard and said: "Is it well with thee, my brother?"

At Barnsville, Ga., Senator Walter F. George was depicted as a scholar and a gentleman; a pious God-bless-you was murmured and the hope that "we will always be friends." There was none of Joab's rough sword play, but the hidden dagger was there and the intent to slay politically. Thus after the lapse of centuries we find a parallel to the sinister tragedy of Jewish history; but in the hearts of thousands outside the State of Georgia there is a fervent hope that a good and high-minded Senator will escape the doom planned for him by professed friends. Washington, Aug. 23.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As, I believe, the first Southerner to suggest Mr. Roosevelt's initial nomination in a newspaper contribution, the following may be condoned:

The writer is only one of a probable 90 per cent of the American electorate who believes that deep down in his heart our President hates dictatorships and that being true he should drop the "purge!"

He should not, as Dr. Norvin Green, president of Western Union, accused Postmaster General Wanamaker a quarter century ago, "Smile and smile and damn us while he smiles," for he is the commander in chief of a militant world army fighting for world democracy and with the issue ominously doubtful!

To this writer there appears no existing emergency that can justify the impulsion of the purge. Let it drop with a resounding thud that will be heard around the world.

GEORGE E. GARY.
Rome, Ga., Aug. 23.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: According to Green's History of the English people, a feudal dependent, or a vassal, upon investiture, took the following oath of allegiance to his lord, while kneeling, bareheaded and holding up his hands, both together between those of his lord, who sat before him:

"Hear, my lord, I become liege man of yours for life and limb and earthly regard, and I will keep faith and loyalty to you for life and death, God help me," whereupon he received a kiss from his lord. A READER.

The Post Impressionist

Bucolica Exotica America.

O DAVID, O Theocritus, O Virgil! I believe your harps and green hills, your nymphs and Pan-pipes, your plowmen and your rustic muse, but did you ever see sheep? Real sheep, such as are bred by the barbarians of New Hampshire?

I learned about sheep a week or so ago when I was chaperoning an engaged couple near Temple. The two usually spent their days walking. They explored the roads and paths that I suggested and returned late in the afternoon with tales of their adventures. They were sylvan adventures—a meeting with a cat, a glass of water offered by some lively Swedish child. One day, when they asked me to accompany them, I bethought me of two caves I had discovered some years earlier, small caves in a field, hand built, whose age and use had often puzzled me.

So, one bright morning, we set out on the Jaffrey road. About 2 miles up, we turned south along a grass-green wide road lined with rock maples. It was a beautiful road. A stone wall bordered it behind the trees and the land sloped away in gray rock ledges with patches of juniper and blueberry and mountain laurel glistening between. The sun came checker-patterned through the leaves, and a brook crossed the road and ran beside us for a while, then dove, gurgling, under the wall. We chattered and sang, and were very happy to be walking in the summertime.

At the crest of a small hill, we turned west through a break in the wall and started climbing. We followed a hard narrow path that my young friends romantically decided must be a deer run. Finally we clambered to a small plateau of gray rock glistening with mica. Before us, Monadnock, "the mountin," as the natives call it, spread its benign and easy slopes. The land between flowed and ebbed in currents of dark pines beside the light leaf-shedding trees, divided before the patched tan and white of a plowed clearing and its farmhouse, then closed again beyond.

The sweethearts stretched out on the granite and shut their eyes. I was about to do the same when a distant baa-baa startled me wide awake. "Sheep," Maurice' murmured, settling his shoulder blades more comfortably in a crevice.

A little above us and about a hundred yards away, I saw a sheep trot a little distance, repeat the baa and return to its original position accompanied by two others. The sheep repeated this sortie with its cacophonous accompaniment perhaps a dozen times and the gathered flock increased. My guests slept on, but I had lost all sense of tranquillity. I was fascinated by this gathering of the clans. Pibroch sounded and the sheep answered with war-like emphasis, their gray backs gathering into a sizable monadnock.

Then, for a minute, everything was still. The gray mound had disappeared.

Suddenly, over a nearer rock showed the malevolent long face of the leader, her twenty-odd followers close after. Baa-baa split the air in twenty brazen cymbals.

"I'm leaving," I said to my companions. "You can do as you like."

Maurice opened his eyes and turned toward the noise. "They can't hurt you," he said, getting up very quickly.

We ran. Over the bare rock ledge, in the wilderness of New Hampshire, slipping and sliding, without a loose stone or stick to grasp for moral support, we ran in terror and ignominy. And the sheep ran, too. They were very agile and they knew the terrain. "They can't hurt you," Maurice gasped between breaths. A blare like a cracked trumpet sounded almost in our ears and after that he concentrated on flight.

Led by some old recollection, I turned sharp right, slid down a small cliff and landed in front of one of the caves I had promised as a part of the divertissement. It was a little cave, just large enough for one person. I ignored the fact that I should let my guests have shelter first. It would be too terrible for one of them to perish on this bleak hillside. Lovers should die together. So I took the cave and left them outside.

I had no sooner got in than I heard the sheep arrive at the cliff-edge, with a terrific roar and a clatter of stones as they braked. It was some seconds before I mustered the courage to peer out. When I did, I encountered the yellow, vicious gaze of the flock leader. The rest had turned aside and were nibbling gravel. But they were on the alert for orders. The great gray one opened her huge muzzle and smoke poured forth. Baaaaa, she snorted while her eyes flashed yellow fire.

When I looked again, they had all disappeared. We tip-toed back to the stone wall and to the grass-grown, shadowed road. We were not hurt—everyone assures me that we couldn't have been hurt.

But, O David, O Theocritus, O Virgil! What were your sheep like?

Practice And Preaching.

THERE are some walks of life in which a man is almost obliged to practice what he preaches, failing which he discredits his own preaching. Thus the parson is expected to refrain from crap shooting, dramming and lally-gagging, and the president of a great republic finds his own conduct measured against his utterances bearing on propriety in such circumstances. To a less extent, but to some extent, he is also held accountable for the conduct of persons under his control or for whom he vouches.

If a President should utter with a withering note the phrase "well-fed clubmen," that expression would be taken to indicate that he himself, although sufficiently fed, was not a clubman and had scorn for such. But if it should then be shown by reference to "Who's Who in America," edition of 1927-28, that he then was a member of the Harvard Club, the Knickerbocker Club, the City Club and the highly aristocratic Racquet and Tennis Club, of New York, it would be no more than natural for his subjects to exclaim, "Listen who's talking about well-fed clubmen!"

Even if he should resign all such memberships or, for reasons of political discretion, omit the listing from his biographical sketch for 1934-35, the sketch for the 1927-28 volume would be used as the gauge of his consistency and sincerity. Not that there is necessarily anything wrong with the state of being well fed and a clubman. It would be merely that the President had set up a strong suggestion that there was something wrong about it.

• • • •

THEN, AGAIN, if a President should denounce "economic royalists" and someone very near to him should write an intimate autobiography describing the life of a numerous family in terms of accustomed luxury and inherited wealth, with never a single word from cover to cover about the work of productive enterprise of any provider, that, too, would prompt an honest skeptic to say, "Well, now, let's see."

A skeptic, mind you, not a heretic.

A heretic, of course, is a terrible thing, but probably some of your best friends are skeptics.

And then if the President, having used these terms, should make a speech urging moderation in debate and should follow that up with a denunciation of his political opponents as "Copperheads"—wait a minute. Where are we, anyway?

Either he is inconsistent and insincere or he considers the terms "well-fed clubman," "economic royalists," "Copperhead" and, oh, yes, "bourbon," to be moderate expressions. And if he thinks these to be such, then he cannot object to being called a carpetbagger himself—a nasty one, if you will, but no worse than "Copperhead."

BUT, SENSIBLY, it is idle to pretend that these are not all intemperate terms. On paper and alone they have no special meaning, but in their political and social context they represent name-calling or, in the verbal sense, blows, and this brings us to another kink. For we are supposing that the same President, in the "Copperhead" speech, says that he who resorts to blows in debate concedes that he has run out of arguments.

Let us picture, too, the case of a President who thinks it wrong of a President to go campaigning in State elections but correct for the same man to do this in the role of party leader on the President's travel allowance.

Or conjure a case in which a President speaks warningly of rich men who ride in carriages and drink expensive wine on the same day that a rich young man so like his own son as to be mistaken for him squirts wine in the ceremonial plug hat of a French mayor while riding in a carriage.

• • • •

OR IMAGINE, if you can, a President who says it is "indefensibly unethical" for a relative of a political leader to be in the surety business, elevating to a position of power a son who accepted a $15,000 job from a group of promoters with no illusions that he was worth that money on ability alone and who explained it this way: "Father had become a national figure. The name was likely to become an asset. See? . . . Me? I was newly married, needed money, thought it was wonderful."

But this must be foolishness. No President would do all this, would he?

An Alabama View

State Pardon Board's Vote Against Clemency For Two Remaining Scottsboro "Boys" Regretted By Montgomery Editor.

Following is an editorial statement published recently by the Montgomery Advertiser.

THE ADVERTISER'S respect for the three members of the pardon board as persons and its respect for their official position in particular is such that under ordinary circumstances it would have no comment to make upon the board's "unanimous" vote against clemency for two of the remaining five "Scottsboro" defendants—the fate of but two of the five being at issue at the moment—but the circumstances are extraordinary, indeed, probably without precedent.

The issue involved is of such importance that the Advertiser does not hesitate to express its regret that the pardon board is unwilling to advise the Governor to grant clemency. We think that, while the board undoubtedly acted conscientiously and with due regard for its responsibility as a public agency, nevertheless it missed an opportunity to clinch Alabama's case before the civilized world.

The Advertiser, for itself, and it has no doubt that it speaks for the majority of responsible Alabamians, resents the indignities heaped upon our people in connection with this revolting affair. The Advertiser has desired to see the courts of Alabama function freely and independently; it has believed in the integrity, though it has never doubted the prejudices, of Alabama juries; it has believed in, though it has never doubted the prejudices of, even the Supreme Court of the United States.

Requests Executive To Reconsider Case.

THE ADVERTISER has consistently supported the attorney general, the circuit solicitors and the juries in going forward dauntlessly in trying these cases upon their merits—as nearly, of course, as they could be tried upon their merits. After the courts had done their duty and washed their hands, it seemed to the Advertiser that then Alabamians should ask the executive department of the State government—whose constitutional responsibilities in the premises are equal to those of the courts—to reconsider all that had been done and said and act finally in the higher interests of all concerned.

This we now do. The State of Alabama has at last had its way. It has repeatedly convicted "the boys," some of whom are now growing old in the service of our prisons; Alabama has been repeatedly taunted by the Supreme Court of the United States and by agitators in two hemispheres, with the result that Alabama has been given a bad name the round world over.

Last Tuesday, the sons of two former Governors and Senators of Alabama, themselves men of great weight in the counsels of contemporary Alabamians, stood before the pardon board and pleaded with it that, for the sake of the good name of the State, it would in due order re-evaluate all that had been done and so give Alabama's final answer to the world, and so doing redeem the prestige of the State without in any way mocking justice.

Decency Of Alabama Declared Personified.

IF THERE IS any decency in Alabama, surely it is personified by Donald Comer and Forney Johnston. The State has not produced two better men, however much old-time partisans might wrangle about the wisdom of their mighty fathers, Braxton Bragg Comer and Joseph Forney Johnston.

Mr. Johnston and Mr. Comer did not argue the question of guilt or innocence, because the question of guilt or innocence is more technical than moral. They pleaded for the good name of Alabama. They said the ends of justice had at last been served. Now they asked that Alabama, having won its fight before the world, do the gracious, generous thing and commit the remaining defendants to the care of those who promise to take them away and try to rehabilitate them.

We said the "remaining" defendants. This is a pertinent adjective. For of the nine, four were long set free at the insistance of the attorney-general, who nol-prossed their cases. It seems obvious that "the boys" are all of them guilty or that none of them is guilty. Surely they are not half innocent and half guilty.

What is involved? The "honor" and "dignity" of two hookwormy Magdalenes who had an encounter with a gang of hobo Negroes and a number of white men whom they fought and drove off the famous train—incidentally, where are those white men now? Can any official of Alabama account for them?—or the honor and dignity of a sovereign State whose officials from the beginning have deported themselves honorably and faithfully and now face another turn in the course of their duty?

State's Inconsistency Appealed To Governor.

HOW CAN the State of Alabama, now that at last it has had its way, face a jeering world and explain why it nol-prosses the cases against four men and denies clemency to the remaining five, when all of them are plainly equally guilty or innocent?

How can the executive branch of the State government quibble over the question of guilt or innocence for all—in view of the four nolle prosequies—when Judge James E. Horton, who tried these cases in the earlier years, and Judge W. W. Callahan, who tried them in the later years, are hopelessly divided in their opinions as to the question of guilt or innocence?

We turn now to Gov. David Bibb Graves, who was a silent witness to the hearing of last Tuesday, who knows all about this nasty affair. In the end, he must decide what shall be the pattern of Alabama's face before the world. It is his constitutional responsibility to make the final decision. He is as free to act in the light of his convictions as any court or any advisory board before him. Nothing that any court or any board has done before him can bind him. He is, as Forney Johnston said Tuesday, the "final repository of justice" in Alabama.

Without prejudice to the intelligence or the integrity of the three gentlemen who compose his advisory committee, the pardon board, the Advertiser appeals to Gov. Graves to broaden the perspective that has been drawn, to consult, not so much his warm heart as his ample imagination as the leader of a people and the exponent of a civilization!

As we said more than a year ago, "Let Alabama throw away this body of death that is Scottsboro!"

Of Public Interest

By Ernest Lindley

Roosevelt And Farley.

THE conversation between the President and James A. Farley at Hyde Park ought to have been worth hearing. Since their last talk in Washington about six weeks ago, Mr. Roosevelt has made some important, perhaps irrevocable, decisions concerning the management of the Democratic Party. And they don't mix well with Mr. Farley's ideas of peace and harmony within the organization.

First of all, there is the general question of disowning the anti-New Deal Democrats. Mr. Farley saw the so-called "purge" coming on during the spring and early summer months. He advised against it except in cases, like that of Senator Tydings, where, first, a candidate has a clearcut record of opposition and, second, the chances of defeating him seem reasonably good. When he passed through Colorado without calling for the defeat of Senator Adams and through Nevada without calling for the defeat of Senator McCarran, the President seemed to be heeding Mr. Farley's advice.

Until the President actually spoke in Georgia, the hope that he would "lay off" Senator George also lingered with Mr. Farley's closest associates in Washington. Mr. Farley may have been resigned in his own mind to Mr. Roosevelt's determination to ask for Senator George's defeat, but it is doubtful that he expected the President to speak so explicitly. The President has left no room for a reconciliation after the primary; whether he wins or loses in the primary, Senator George is "out" of the party so far as the Roosevelt Administration is concerned.

THE IDAHO situation illustrates even more pointedly the difference between Mr. Farley's and Mr. Roosevelt's ideas of the way to manage the Democratic Party. Mr. Farley has congratulated Representative D. Worth Clark, the anti-New Deal Democrat who defeated Senator James P. Pope in the primary—with the aid of Republican votes. He is flatly opposed to the plan to run Senator Pope as an independent. As between Mr. Clark and a Republican, Mr. Farley would rather have Mr. Clark as a Senator from Idaho. A good many of Mr. Roosevelt's New Deal lieutenants would rather have a Republican—although many of them think Senator Pope can win if he re-enters the contest as an independent.

No one knows better than Mr. Farley that he gradually has been relieved of some of his duties as party manager. There is no reason to doubt that he understands why: because he has not shown the proper enthusiasm for Mr. Roosevelt's aim to assure that his policies are carried forward after 1940 by a Progressive Democratic Party. Mr. Roosevelt's more progressive lieutenants are convinced that Mr. Farley has underestimated either Mr. Roosevelt's determination or his ability to achieve his purpose.

THE CHANGING situation in New York may be a measure of the ground Mr. Farley has lost. Mr. Roosevelt and he have a common interest in the election of a Democratic Governor and a Democratic Senator this year. Each has an interest in assuring that the New York delegation to the national convention of 1940 does not fall into hostile hands. But at several points the interests of Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Farley may diverge. One is in the selection of a candidate for Governor. During the next two years this office will be of exceptional importance for two reasons: because, through patronage, it usually can control part of the delegation to the national convention, and because it is conspicuous practice ground for the Presidency.

In the President's official family are three persons who might be groomed for 1940 by election to the governorship of New York: Robert H. Jackson, Harry L. Hopkins and James A. Farley. Mr. Farley has shown no enthusiasm whatsoever for the selection as a gubernatorial candidate of any Democrat who might be a Presidentail candidate. For himself, the election would only be an added risk and two years in Albany probably would not add to his own power or prestige; in fact, in leaving Washington, he probably would lose much of the national influence in the party which he now has.

When Mr. Farley left for Alaska, his intention was to "draft" Senator Wagner for the governorship. Senator Wagner is probably the strongest candidate the Democrats could choose, but, because of his birth, he is ineligible for the Presidency. Senator Wagner wants to remain in the Senate, and it is extremely doubtful that he could be prevailed upon to change his mind.

IT'S CONCEIVABLE that the President will decide that he wants Mr. Hopkins or Mr. Jackson nominated for Governor. A few months ago Mr. Farley could have blocked either of them easily by reporting that "the boys" objected. But now it looks as if Thomas E. Dewey, district attorney of New York County, would be drafted for Governor by the Republicans. Whether he wins or loses, his prosecution of James J. Hines is doing Tammany no good, and there is a widespread suspicion that before he has finished, he will smear other Democratic leaders in New York. Already some of the organization Democrats are talking of asking Mr. Roosevelt to name the State ticket, provided he will promise to speak in its behalf.

Maybe Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Farley will find that they see eye to eye on the choice of a Democratic ticket in New York. Maybe they will have a "showdown" on the management of the party in the whole country. But there are friends of both who are willing to guess that the nearest they got to a frank understanding were some jocular remarks by "Big Jim" about all the applecarts that have been upset during his absence and a gleeful laugh by Mr. Roosevelt. The best proof that Mr. Roosevelt doesn't know how to be a dictator is the good-natured independence of his chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

The Once Over

Civilization Cross-Section.

To the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co.

Gentlemen: I see where you plan to bury somewhere on the New York World's Fair grounds a "time capsule" containing certain things that will constitute a record of American civilization when dug up 5,000 years from now, and I join the many who have submitted suggestions:

2. Pictures of Shirley Temple, Tom Dewey, Mayor LaGuardia (operating a steam shovel), Father Divine, Joe Louis, Ginger Rogers, Secretary Perkins, Seabiscuit, Greyhound, Jimmy Hines and John L. Lewis.

3. A hamburger (with onions) wrapped in cellophane.

4. Movies recording a Corrigan welcoming reception, and President Roosevelt dedicating a Canadian bridge (with sound).

5. A series of pictures showing the Flea Circus, the Metropolitan Opera House, an orange-drink stand and a de luxe shooting gallery.

• • • •

6. A basket of policy slips, a description of the numbers game, a program of classical music at a Central Park outdoor concert, a phonographic record of a Jimmy Durante song, an ear of corn on the cob, a three-decker sandwich, a baseball autographed by Babe Ruth, a quart of clam chowder in a paper container.

7. One of those "dolls hats" prescribed for women's wear this fall. A male and female swim suit. A strapless evening gown. A lipstick. A box of assorted phonograph records, including "A Tisket, a Tasket" and "My Country, 'Tis of Thee."

8. Copy of a fireside chat, a time-payment agreement on a new auto, a summons, a typical Rudy Vallee radio program, a WPA check, a racing program, an income tax blank and a reply by Jimmy Roosevelt to a story by Alva Johnston.

10. The radio blurb for a toothpaste, hair tonic or cigarette.

• • • •

11. A can of beer, a margin call, a program of music at the Lewisohn Stadium, the scorecards of the Ambers-Armstrong fight, a dollar shore-dinner menu, a microphone, an ice cream cone and four makes of aspirin tablets.

Very truly yours,

Excuse, plizz, if badly educated American fail to comprehend modulations of English language written by cultured Japanese journalist. Just other day, natives of egregious United States read these words in newspaper called the Japanese American: "The Japanese Association of Tokyo recently held a grand mass meeting to commemorate the outbreak of the China incident last year and to further the friendship between Japan and China."

Bewildered American numskull admit hat description very fine, very true, but needful of delectable amplification. So humble Westerner suggest massacre of helpless civilians after taking of Nanking be called fun and games; bombing of Chinese women be called bridal shower, and looting of houses be called charity raffle. Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett.

Stately Mansions.

PAUL STARRETT has a right to the title he gives his autobiography, "Changing the Skyline" (Whittlesey House, $3). He built the Flatiron Building, the Macy store, the Hippodrome, the National City Bank and the towering Bank of Manhattan Building at 40 Wall Street, the Pennsylvania Station and the Postoffice behind it, the Plaza, the Biltmore, the Commodore and the Pennsylvania hotels, the New York Life, the McGraw-Hill and the Empire State Buildings—among others.

• • • •

ADD THE STATLER HOTELS in Detroit and Cleveland, the Munsey Building, the New Willard Hotel and the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, and minor skyscrapers in Baltimore, Chicago, Philadelphia and way stations, and you wonder why Mr. Starrett did not call his book Changing the Face of the Nation. For, although he tells at some length of the fortunate diffidence which kept him from success as an insurance agent and turned him to architecture and building, the reader of this galloping book is not likely to think that diffidence is today among Mr. Starrett's major vices. He has done big things, and he is justly proud of them.

Paul was one of five Starrett boys, sons of a carpenter-preacher out in Kansas, and they all drifted into the building business in time. Why or how the record hardly makes clear; I suspect that Webo Waldron, who collaborated with Mr. Starrett in preparing this book, had some difficulty in getting the builder away from cubic feet and steel tensions to the more personal aspects of the story.

AT 16 Paul quit school and became stock boy in a hardware store—salary, $4 a week. Insurance selling netted him nothing. As stenographer in a grain commission house he mounted to $10 a week. Then, after an interlude as a ranch clerk in New Mexico, which gave him his physique, Paul Starrett came into the office of Burnham & Root, architects of the Chicago World's Fair, still a stenographer, and this time down to $7.50 a week. But the boy also could copy plans, and he took a quick interest in engineering problems.

It was Daniel Burnham, a great architect and a great idealist, who gave Paul his start in life. Curious, indeed, are Starrett's two major recollections of the dreaming designer of the Chicago World's Fair, the father of American city planning. Burnham found the younger man working over his notes late one night. "Don't you know that you can hire any number of engineers who will be contented to spend their whole lives doing routine?" he said. "You Starrett boys are different. You have a genius for organization and leadership." Another time Burnham said to Starrett: "Remember this: 75 per cent of your success will be your ability to go out and get the job."

It was. Paul Starrett had a gift for human contacts, a knack at getting the orders. He forgot his architecture and devoted himself to organization. As befitted his age, he became an apostle of speed. Almost every skyscraper he built set a new record.

Of course, he met most of the big business men of his day, and his portraits of some of them are sharp and of others pleasantly acid. He tells how Stanford White bullied Frank Munsey into eagerness to spend an extra $150,000 on one of his buildings; how Henry Frick expressed doubt of the genuineness of one of his antiques, remarking meditatively, "I'm not sure. I bought it from J. P. Morgan. Maybe it's genuine;" how Whitney Warren sent a necktie, a shirt and one of his wife's skirts as clews to the colors for the showroom in the Aeolian Building; how Al Smith tried to jockey him into building the Empire State Building without a profit, as advertisement. ("Look at Dobbs," said Al. "Dobbs gives me all my hats, and when I go out and make a speech I hold up the hat so that people can see the name Dobbs on it.")

HE TELLS, too, how the National City Bank is built on oak logs laid in quicksand, and why sand is the finest foundation for any big building; how the weight of the Empire State Building shrunk its steel girders by 6 inches, and why the mooring mast does not sway the legendary 6 feet but only a mere 2½ inches, even when the wind blows a hundred miles an hour. He gives a few hints of the big-business ramifications of his business, and insists that he never paid graft to any labor racketeer. (He seems to have met some, however.) "I have usually employed union men exclusively," he says, "because they are almost always better than nonunion."

Now past 70, he philosophizes a little, somewhat painfully, then returns eagerly to tell of practical problems mastered. A man of his age, he half-likes Mayor La Guardia's prediction that the Empire State Building will remain the tallest building in the city for at least half a century—and half prefers Daniel Burnham's words, "Remember that our sons and grandsons are going to do things that would stagger us."

On 'Engaging' Italy

By S. Miles Bouton

How The Wind Blows In Germany.

Special Correspondent to The Post.

GEN. FRANCO'S flat refusal of the proposal to rid Spain of alien fighters and his demand for belligerent rights from Britain are further phases of significant developments. The whole course and trend of events in Europe in the last few weeks are squarely in line with Hitler's orders of last May that there must be created "a diplomatic situation as favorable as posisble for a German initiative, and a tension in Spain full of explosive stuff and automatically engaging Italy." Part of that program was to put Neville Chamberlain in a hole, and that is precisely where the trustful aristocrat now finds himself.

That Italy is "engaged" is equally obvious. Hitler—who since July 1 has had a carefully guarded, untapable direct telephone connection with Mussolini—has been working on his Italian fellow dictator to embarrass Chamberlain, whom the Nazi Fuehrer likes even less than he liked Prime Minister Baldwin, and one now sees another fruit of his efforts. Back of these efforts is the plan of so cooling relations between Italy and Britain that London would be more disposed to reach a rapprochement with Berlin. Significant is the comment of the Frankfort Gazette on Chamberlain's recent reference to the British-German naval agreement:

"It is to be commended that Mr. Chamberlain directed attention to political realities by which the relations between Germany and England must be decided, and that—after a long delay and finally—he again recalled what a great service for European peace the German-English naval agreement represents."

IF THE French trade unions and the Front Populaire commit the stupendous and unpatriotic folly of calling a general strike to resist Premier Daladier's decree doing away with the 40-hour week, it may be the signal to start Nazi troops moving eastward. Three times in as many years Hitler has taken advantage of internal dissensions in France. Barring such folly, it is not likely that any move will come until after the Nazi "Parteitag" (party convention) at Nuremberg in September. But unless all signs fail, the much postponed war will then be due, assuming that Czechoslovakia insists on retaining her independence.

Information purporting to come "from the most competent source"—and previous information has been dependable—now reaches me to the effect that the February purge of generals and other high officers in the Nazi army is to be repeated. There are still many such officers who insist in telling Der Fuehrer that Germany is not ready for war—that neither munitions nor provisions are on hand in sufficient quantities. They point also to what they regard as a certainty that the whole economic resources of the United States will be at the disposal of Germany's enemies, and that, in short, war will mean the end of the Third Reich.

According to my information, the list of officers to be purged and the list of SS (Black Shirt) men who are to succeed them are ready. When news of the purge comes, it is declared, that will be the prologue to a "lightning-like thrust" eastward and toward the wheat and petroleum of southeastern Europe and the Balkins. Hitler is moved by the rapid progress of the democratic countries' rearming, and realizes that "it is not now enough to pucker up his lips: he must whistle." According to the same source, Goering and Heinrich Himmler, head of the Secret Political Police, have both been won over completely to Hitler's view. The list of officers to be purged has even been drawn up by Himmler.

A BERLIN correspondent minimized the idea of war in a recent dispatch because, he said, the mobilization now going on had been such a tremendous strain on the country's resources that war could not be thought of. But that is precisely why it must be thought of — provided Germany's vast armaments are not to be maintained merely as ornaments. Day after day brings reports, some directly, others indirectly, showing what the situation is.

One of these indirect indications is the fact that the Reich Bureau of Statistics has been curbed. It is no longer permitted to publish production statistics.

There were food riots before bakeries in Dresden in July. All bread had been sold out and supplies of flour were so scanty that only an insufficient quantity could be baked. When police came to break up the long queues of men and women in front of the shops, they were met by cries that "It's just the same as in 1918!" Reserves had to be called to quiet the people.

With last year's export surplus convered into a huge import surplus, and this despite all throttling of imports, the financial situation grows steadily worse. Not long ago the government declared that no new taxes were contemplated. A fortnight or more ago the corporation tax, which had been 20 per cent, was raised to 35 per cent for 1938 and to 40 per cent for the following two years.

Desertions from the army are frequent and widespread. Thirteen deserters reached Czechoslovakia in July, among them a young man named Ernst Trapper, who was from 1935 to 1937 city editor of the Munich Voelkischer Beobachter, Hitler's newspaper. A comrade deserted with him. Trapper told questioners that both the treatment and the food in the army are intolerable. Trapper asserted that 19 men had deserted from his company alone in Grafenwoerth.

WORD has just arrived of another move by Hitler to "engage" Italy. The Berlin correspondent of the Neue Zuericher Zeitung reports that the Germans of South Tyrol—still more than 80 per cent of the total population—have been abandoned to their fate.

What a concession this means to Mussolini is obvious when one considers the situation among those Germans. They have no German schools, only Italian may be used on the radio, only German may be spoken in the courts or with officials. Tyrolese Germans on relief have had to Italianize their names. They have no representative in Parliament, no German may be a candidate for public office, there are no German civil servants. Twelve Tyrolese went to prison a few months ago for singing German songs. But Italy must be "engaged."

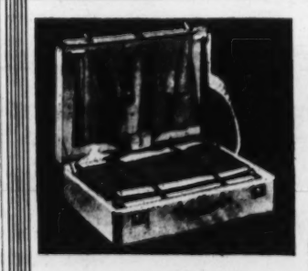

Time works ever more against Hitler. Polonia, leading Catholic newspaper in Poland, a fortnight ago assailed the government for trying to bring about an alliance between the Sudeten Germans and the Polish minority in Czechoslovakia, and sharply attacked Germany for its propaganda in Poland.

"The maintenance of Czechoslavakia," writes the paper, "is of vital importance for the Polish state, for it interposes an important hindrance to German greed for Polish territory. The Germans will soon start the same kind of minority politics in Poland as in Czechoslovakia; indeed, it looks as if they had already begun."

It is to be remembered that Poland is a Catholic country. And the maltreatment of Poles in Danzig has caused general indignation, with threats of forcible intervention to protect Polish rights in the so-called Free State—a name now become a mockery.

Whether war will come this year is uncertain, but if and when reports come of a general strike and riots in Czechoslovakia, the prelude will be there.

Taxi Arithmetic.

"Now how are we going to manage about this taxi fare?"

"Let's all give it to Madge——"

"All right Madge, just take mine out of this dollar——"

"Can you change a $5 bill, Madge?"

"Here's 50 cents, Madge."

"Wait! Wait, everybody! Let's find out how much it is. Say driver . . . You ask him Grace, you're closer."

"All right. Driver, how much will this be? . . . Yes, there's four of us and three stops . . . 80 cents?"

"You're wrong Grace, there's only two stops. Carolyn's going to the office with me."

"All right, driver, there's four of us and two stops . . . he says 70 cents."

"How much is four into seventy?"

"Wait! Say—— we've got to tip him!"

"Sh—don't talk so loud! I think a dime is enough."

"I think he ought to have at least 15 cents."

"Sh—— all right then. How much is 70 plus 15?"

"It's 85—— isn't it?"

"All right then, now four into 85—who's got a pencil and paper?"

"Four into 85 is 21¼ cents."

"All right Madge, here's my dollar."

"If somebody don't change this five, I'll have to write a check."

"Here's my 50 cents, Madge."

"Wait! Wait! What are we going to do about this one-fourth cent?"

"Let everybody give you a quarter and then you'll owe each of us——"

"No, I don't want to owe anybody. Those things worry me——"

"Oh well, I'll just give 25 cents and everybody else can give 20——"

"No, no, that wouldn't be fair."

"Well I'm perfectly willing to pay my part if somebody will change my $5."

"I tell you; I already owe Madge a nickel. I'll just give her 25 cents and the rest of you can give 20 cents."

"All right Madge, take my 20 cents out of this dollar."

"I can't change it."

"Well maybe the driver can. Grace! Grace! . . Ask him if he can change a dollar."

"All right . . . No he says he can't."

"Well, listen, Carolyn, you pay for me and then I'll pay you tomorrow."

"All right, if I can just get this $5 bill changed. Grace! . . . Ask the driver if he can change a five."

"All right . . . No he says he can't."

"Oh say! I've got two cents in my pocket. I'll give you that much Madge and then I'll owe you 20 cents——"

"Then that'll put me three-fourths of a cent ahead——"

"No we're only to give 20 cents apiece——"

"Wait I'll just give Madge this 50 cents and then she'll owe me——"

"Now listen! I don't want that hanging over me."

"Say, I owe Carolyn 10 cents, so you can just take that out too——"

"Say, this has got me so mixed up I can't think."

"If somebody just had a pencil and paper——"

"I never was a bit good in mathematics——"

"If I could just get this five changed it'd all be so simple— say I know! I'll just get out at this drug store and buy some mints with it. Driver! Wait! Stop!"

• • • •

"All right, now then girls suppose we let Carolyn pay the driver out of her five and then we'll each owe her 21¼ cents——"

"Say, wait! Ten cents more for a stop."

"Let's see then—85 and 10 that makes 95—say! We've got to start all over figuring again.

A Double Duty Gown

IN PLANNING the fall wardrobe the woman on a limited budget needs at least one ensemble that will double in brass. Most practical of all is the one that can go to dinner one night and to a formal reception the next. Above is Schiaparelli's suggestion for such an outfit. Over a formal black velvet evening gown is worn a lively short bolero decorated with turquoise blue beads and embroidery. With one or two evening dresses and several such jackets anyone would be ready for the social season.

Careless Speech Betrays You

PATTY always thought correct English didn't matter except to a lot of "schoolmarms." Her crowd talks NATURAL.

But now she meets Dick—so well educated and so attractive—and she finds good English does matter. How he freezes when she says WOULD OF for WOULD HAVE SURE for SURELY — and then tacks on an S on ANYWAY.

Poor Patty!

But such jolts come often to people who think attention to speech is an affectation. It's not, of course.

Persons of breeding speak correctly without having to think. With them good English is a habit—and anyone can get the habit.

The first step to speech that wins admiration is—shake out the errors. Try listening to yourself for a whole day.

Do you confide to your chum, "when I COME to the office today, I found such a SIGHT TO DO I'm MOST exhausted"? It's correct to say, "when I CAME," "a LOT TO DO," "ALMOST exhausted."

Do you tell your employer that ALL OF WE girls prefer Blank typewriters? Do you ask your date if he'll LEARN you the new shag step? You should say ALL WE girls, TEACH instead of LEARN.

Practice these correct forms a little while each day and soon they come easily to your tongue.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Young Married Woman Is Madly in Love With Physician, Also Married; How to Solve Triangle?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 23, have been married four years, and until the last year I was happy—or so I thought. But one year ago I fell in love with another man, 35 years old. (Or maybe I shouldn't say "another man," because I believe that he is the only man I have ever loved.) Never have I felt toward my husband as I feel toward this man. Perhaps I should tell you how it all started—so you will know from beginning to end.

• • • •

I was taken sick and went to the doctor's. This doctor (the man I love) is a surgeon, and he performed the operation. After the operation I had to go back often for medical attention. After several visits, I realized I was thinking more of him than I should. I knew, too, that he was feeling the same about me. (You may say: Why didn't I try to get control of my feelings then? I did try, but it did no good whatever). Then one night he took me in his arms and kissed me. After that it was harder for us to stay apart. We were in love with each other and could not help it . . . He also is married.

• • • •

Several months later, I was again taken critically ill and another operation was necessary. Again he performed the operation and during my stay in the hospital many glances were exchanged, and words spoken, which made me sure he still loved me, although he never told me so. Two months later, while I was still going to this doctor for medical attention, he was hurt. I cried and worried about him constantly. The first time I saw him after that injury, I weakened and gave myself to him when he asked me. (He had asked me many times before, but I had refused, thinking of the wrong to my husband and his wife.) But somehow I couldn't feel it was wrong any longer, when I loved him so much. Since then I have given myself to him several times.

• • • •

He has asked me if he can't take me out some night, or call me on the telephone, but so far I have told him "no." He has asked me to promise that if I ever have a child, it shall be his. He has no children. I would gladly do this, if I knew it wouldn't ruin the child's life, by people's finding out that my husband was not its father.

• • • •

I am telling you all this so you can answer my questions better. My husband and I quarrel all the time we are together. I have to admit that I usually start these quarrels. I am not trying to make any excuse for myself, for I know most of the blame is mine, but my husband has a terrible temper, although he is as good to me as the average husband. I have told him I love someone else, but he thinks I am fooling. If he knew what I had done, he would leave me at once. Whenever we quarrel and I say I am going to leave, he tells me to go ahead; that it wouldn't worry him any.

• • • •

I don't know why I stay, when I know that if I leave I can go to the man I love—any time at all. Although I don't believe he would ever leave his wife, I have heard people say that he and she don't get along well together. He has never told me he loves me, but I have every reason to believe that he does. If he didn't, he wouldn't want me to be the mother of his child.

• • • •

Please tell me if I should try to continue living with my husband, making both of our lives miserable, or whether I should leave and make my own way in the world? I know I shall always love the other man, no matter what I do or how much I try to forget. I also know that so long as I can prevent, I shall never have a child for my husband, and somehow I feel that is what marriage is for. Could I have the other man's child and convince my husband it is his? My life is miserable—living with one man and loving another. There is no one, other than you, to whom I can turn for advice. WORRIED.

Spider and Fly.

DEAR WORRIED: Your extra-marital romance is analogous to the spider's wooing of the fly. I dare say you are but one of a series of victims whose lives have been maimed, whose happiness has been tampered with, by this unscrupulous surgeon's vicious indulgence of his greedy sexual vanity. Purely as a passing diversion, he has seen fit to play upon your erstwhile relatively untried emotions as a musician might play an old tune on a familiar instrument. He has prostituted his physician's knowledge of a woman's passional nature and the expert masculine technique designed to arouse that nature, to the end of amusing himself while placing you on a hellish rack, well knowing—had he cared to give it a second's thought; had he been animated by any other than devilishly selfish considerations—that what he was doing, and inviting you to do, would eventually render your home life intolerable to you.

• • • •

He could not help knowing, by virtue of professional training, that he was striking at the very mainsprings of your mental, spiritual and social contentment; that he was giving you to taste of a forbidden fruit whose effects on your personality would be devastating. Never for one moment has he offered you love (for you yourself say, "He has never told me he loves me, but I have every reason to believe that he does . . .") but only an amoral, unscrupulous, sexually greedy man's synthetically amative, while carefully non-committal, performance.

• • • •

His suggestion that you bear his child is a wheeze as old as sin itself. It doesn't mean a thing, so far as proving the sincerity of his demonstration is concerned. It merely gratifies his ego to see and hear you so tremblingly eager to make so tremendous a gift, so burdensome a sacrifice, to him. No civilized man of decent instincts verbally invites the woman he loves to bear his child, unless and until he is prepared to give her the full social protection and tender personal ministration she needs so sorely during that period of utter helplessness and self-abnegation.

• • • •

If you wish to put this man's supposed love to the test and find out what a sham it is; if you wish to discover just how fallacious is your belief that you can go to him, "any time at all," and be met with open arms and adequate allegiance and aid—march into his office one day and tell him (in confidence, of course) that you are leaving your husband because of him; that the current triangle is no longer endurable; and that you want his help in plotting your future course. If he doesn't turn pale, break out in a cold sweat and implore you, in the Deity's name, to be careful, I miss my guess. One can imagine him urging you to use your head; not to take things so tragically; to remember that neither you nor he can afford to be involved in a scandal.

• • • •

One can imagine him asking how much your husband knows or suspects, and suggesting that perhaps it will be best for all concerned if you and he (the doctor) do not see each other again. And one can imagine that once he gets you out of his office, by whatever plausible argument, reassurance or appeal, he will shudder with mingled relief and horror while mopping his brow and muttering, "The damn little fool. Will I ever learn!" For that, my dear, is a fair approximation of the way the average philanderer reacts when one of his romances begins to backfire. Sufficient unto the day is the pleasure thereof, for such as he; but when the hour of reckoning comes and the fiddler wants his coin, our heroes of that ilk have urgent business in another quarter. The music has lost its enchantment for them, and little care they who pays the piper.

• • • •

Since you were happy with your husband until you ran afoul of this doctor who is a disgrace to his profession (through having dishonored the trust it imposes); since your husband is "as good to (you) as the average husband;" and since those recent quarrels have been largely your fault, I suggest that you give your marriage another chance, of the most prayerful and assiduously tended sort. I think it is entirely possible that, with psychiatric guidance, you might make a complete transfer back to your husband of those emotions which the physician evoked and centered on himself. Give it a year's trial. If, at the end of that time, your efforts are still unavailing, it will be time enough to consider leaving your husband and trying "to make (your) own way in the world." Also (after satisfying yourself, if you like, that the physician's interest in you is as selfish and superficial as I have indicated) get yourself another medical adviser, and one whose ethics are adequate to the demands of his profession.

• • • •

You must break with this man at once. Under his malicious influence you are losing your bearings completely, drifting farther and farther from reality into a topsy-turvy, make-believe world where sane, enduring moral and social values (such as make for lasting happiness) do not exist. It is, for instance, insidiously corruptive of him to suggest, and preposterously melodramatic of you to entertain, any thought of having a child under the circumstances. The sowing of the seed of the idea is, in itself, designed to enslave your emotions, imaginatively; and it is not for you to permit yourself to be enslaved, in any guise, by a scoundrel, and such is what I conceive this physician to be. If your husband is possessed of common decency, he is worth a dozen of him, so far as your happiness is concerned, and don't let the glamour of the doctor's professional standing blind your eyes to this fact. Remember, when it comes to bearing a child, that hereditary is a mighty factor for good or ill; and that sound character is a far finer inheritance than any amount of that graceless charm which makes for reckless self-indulgence.

Exotic New Shades Take Black's Place In Paris Fashion

Paris (U.P.).—Every day the winter horizon looks brighter, the appearance of winter materials substantiates the prophecy that black will be replaced to a great extent by exotic new shades: slate blue, "violine," rich dark reds. Novel color combinatons, always dear to Parsians' hearts, will see rust hobnobbing with gray; cornflower yellows pepping up Burgundy ensembles; green mixing autumnally with brown.

Jerseys, in wool, cotton and rayon mixtures, will not only retain the popularity they've merited during the past season, but they will probably gain more favor because their advocates are now printing the jersey surfaces and interweaving stripes and reliefs of all sorts.

Trim Figure Important In Looking for Jobs

THE girl who wants a job—as well as the one who has one—should keep her figure trim. Here Ann Rutherford, movie actress, demonstrates an exercise for slimmer waist, flatter stomach, and improved bust contour.

First Impression Depends on Posture and Walk; Older Women Need Worry More About Excess Weight Than Number of Birthdays.

By Ida Jean Kain.

THE FIRST Lady of Our Land did a helpful thing for the unemployed girls when she sent a group of them down to a beauty parlor to be fixed up. With her usual grasp of the working girl's problem, Mrs. Roosevelt knows that when a girl looks her best it boosts her morale and betters her chances of getting a job.

Any girl who goes looking for a job these days soon learns that good grooming plays its part in the impression she makes. Unless her hairdo is neat, her nails well kept, it will not matter how neat her shorthand is. But, after all, these are only the finishing touches. Your posture, your poise and your figure are the big things in your appearance.

The first impression you make in applying for a new job depends upon the way you walk into the office. If you slouch in, the odds are against you, for, while slumping may be caused by fatigue, a lack of vitality or merely habit, it is interpreted as dejection and a lack of self-confidence. "No spunk," the potential employer will conclude, and he will turn to the fine, upstanding lassie who looks as if she can shoulder her part of the load.

You make a better appearance—look younger and more efficient—with a trim figure than you do with excess weight and disproportionate measurements. The story of the two women over 40 who went around the country getting jobs everywhere with no trouble at all should keep you from worrying about whether you are too old to get work. The important thing is to look alert and young for your age. An employer knows that only years of experience develop the faculty of judgment.

During your enforced holiday, use your time to improve yourself in every way that you can. Don't lie in bed in the mornings because you haven't any office to go to. Get up and out into the fresh air for the invigorating activity that will build you up, give you a lovely figure and keep you in a good frame of mind.

And now that you have the time for those special exercises, use it to slim your hips, nip in the waist and generally beautify your figure. It's the woman who no longer cares about her figure who looks old. Incidentally, the exercises that make for lovely measurements also will improve your posture.

While you are budgeting closely, never try to skimp on the protective foods. You can do no better than to buy a pint of milk a day—and drink it! Also, you need whole-wheat bread, whole-grain cereals, fruits, vegetables and eggs. You can lose weight or gain it on these foods. They are the protective foods and are essential to vitality and good looks.

A really thorough-going reconditioning program takes time, and that's one thing the girl who is job hunting has. Any girl who uses her leisure to improve herself in every way that she can will never be out of work for long.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Aug. 25.

IT WAS the hottest day fo the year—93-plus on the Government's stop-watch, but way over par on our streets and the Hudson piers. My helpmate had quit the typewriter, stripped to his shorts and sat around barking like a seal. No one threw him a fish. And that was the day the Normandie had to stagger in carrying the first big load of spies, scouts stylists from the Paris shows!

ALICE HUGHES.

I checked all these girls and boys, most of whom I have known for years. I noted that the ladies nearly all wore two primary signals of the autumn's fashions—pulled-up hair and a dash of magenta in their costumes. Lilly Dache, the milliner; Hilda, a colleague; Jo Copland, dress designer; Mrs. William Holmes, wife of a big store tycoon—all had their locks pushed up, and sported some fuchsia. This Mrs. Holmes seemed to win all honors as best-dressed woman in an exceptionally well-turned-out cargo. She wore a Maria Guy hat that floated a long fuchsia ostrich plume, and her suit was a Creed ensemble, with a vest striped diagonally with fuchsia and black. Yep, she was two eyesful! Of course, there were exceptions.

• • • •

Nicole, the milliner, insists Paris is far from sold on the brushed-up hair-do. By all odds the prettiest girl aboard, and probably the world's loveliest blonde, was Madeleine Carroll, the British movie queen, who has returned to do a picture with Mr. Charles McCarthy, kindly assisted, of course, by Mr. Edgar Bergen. "My husband thinks I'm crazy to sail 3,000 miles to keep a date with a dummy," La Carroll told me. "Just the same, I'm sure he's glad it's a dummy and not a handsome and glomorous man." That's right, Maddy, old gell!

• • • •

They all had their penny's worth, agreeing that the Paris clothes showed no startling style upsets. They were impressed, variously, by the leg-of-muton sleeve, the tiny waistline, the popularity of purple, the renewal of muffs, and hats of silver fox. The day wore out, and so did I. The spouse barked on.

THE SOAP OF BEAUTIFUL WOMEN

Readers Take Prizes With Recipes Bearing Gay Names.

Pie Congealed With Spice and 'End of Trail' Among Entries.

By Alice Clayton,
The Post Food Editor.

ALTHOUGH gelatine has as lowly an origin as any other food known to man, it has recently assumed as exquisite a guise as a summer cloud. In fact, "cloud-like" is the term used by certain epicurean extremists in referring to such desserts. Local hostesses have apparently agreed with the gourmets' delight over gelatine, as evidenced by the high quality of their entries in The Post recipe contest, last week.

When the gelatine dessert recipes poured in during the last eight days, it was apparent that judgment of this particular contest would be difficult. As the last gelatine recipes for tested butterscotch puddings, wine jellies and Spanish creams were read, it was apparent that many Washington women highly approve the merits of speed, economy and beauty of this dessert ingredient, to say nothing of its mildness of flavor. Lime sherbets, molded dessert salads and puddings of all descriptions were entered. Fruit-ribbons, apricot prune puddings, vanilla wafer delights and gelatine cakes were a few of the more popular sweets.

Daffodil bavarian, jellied black cherry mold, Peter Pan and peanut pudding, Oriental delight and Boston molded custard were not only fancifully named and attractive looking but contained ingredients of nourishment and value. Gelatine being one of the few foods with no fattening qualities, its virtues have been suggested both by contestants who were conscious of the necessity for low caloric diets and those who garnish it with rich food stuffs. One of the most delightfully fanciful desserts entered was duck ponds, by Mrs. John Schulz, 4206 Tenth street northwest, who designed this entry especially for a small child's party.

THE glistening sparkle of gelatine desserts is unsurpassed as a summer temptress, and local hostesses have discovered the versatility lurking in its shimmering goodness. Five ingenious homemakers have just been awarded cash prizes for their gelatine dessert recipes.

Pie Congealed With Spice.

Mrs. Mary Doyle, 3435 R street northwest, was given the first prize of $3 for her Spicy Amber Pie. Although several excellent gelatine pie entries were contesting for cash awards, the smooth, rich creaminess of Mrs. Doyle's pie was considered of particular interest. The use of high spices in a gelatine dish is out of the ordinary, and in the case of cloves, nutmeg and cinnamon combined with whipped cream, egg whites and raisins, a result of unusual piquancy is obtained.

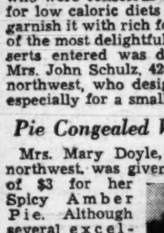

Mrs. Doyle.

Spicy Amber Pie.

Cook over low heat 3 egg yolks, slightly beaten, ½ cup sugar, ¾ cup milk, ¼ teaspoon cinnamon, ⅛ teaspoon nutmeg and ⅛ teaspoon cloves. Add 1 cup of softened gelatine to the hot custard mixture and stir until dissolved. Cool and when mixture begins to congeal fold in ½ cup steamed raisins and 3 egg whites, stiffly beaten with ¼ cup sugar added. Pour into a baked pie shell and place in the refrigerator to chill and congeal. Just before serving, garnish with a rim of whipped cream.

End of the Trail.

Mrs. Arthur Watier, 1722 C street northeast, has received the second award of $2. She appears to have reached her Eldorado of desserts, for she has named her contribution Rainbow and Pot of Gold. This illusive sounding dish is not as vague as it appears on the surface, because it turns out to be a delicious salad dessert of unquestionable daintiness and flavor. Mrs. Watier has utilized her combinations in an unusual and effective manner.

Mrs. Watier.

A Rainbow and Pot of Gold.

Soak 2¼ tablespoons gelatine in ¼ cup cold water, dissolve in ½ cup boiling water, add 2-3 cup sugar, ⅓ cup lemon juice and 1 cup white wine. Pour into 4 flour bowls. Color and flavor thus: Violet—add 3 tablespoons grape juice; green—add 3 tablespoons pineapple juice that has been boiled and few drops green coloring; pink—add 3 tablespoons strawberry juice (or cherry) and few drops coloring if needed.

Pour into a long narrow mold, one layer at a time, allowing each to harden in the refrigerator before pouring the next. When firm, unmold on cold platter. Place at one end 1 large orange, with 1-3 of top cut off. Scoop out and fill with 1 cup cream, whipped, with ½ teaspoon grated orange rind and a little gold coloring.

Layers of Sweetness.

Miss Dorothy Rowe, 140 B street, northeast, has been awarded a $1 123456123456123456 prize for a gelatine desert of crispy texture. Macaroon Chocodate Pudding turns out to be one of those desserts that can be served repeatedly during the summer without fear of repetition on the part of the hostess, as it has a crunchy goodness of flavor which always seems new and fresh. As Miss Rowe remarks, "This is a delicious dessert and very interesting looking too" for the alternating layers of chocolate and macaroons create an interesting color contrast.

Miss D. Rowe.

Macaroon-Chocolate Pudding.

Dissolve 1 tablespoon granulated gelatine in 2 tablespoons cold water. Add ¼ cup boiling water, stirring until blended. When cold, whip 1 pint cream and add. Divide mixture in 2 parts. In half of it, stir ¾ pound grated sweet chocolate; in the other half, 6 broken macaroons. Put in mold that has been rinsed with with cold water, in layers, and place in ice box until ready to serve. Unmold.

Ginger-vating Fruits.

A $1 award goes to Mrs. J. R. Murphy, 110 Rucker place, Alexandria, Va. The mere mention of Gingerale Fruits is cooling in itself, and the taste is even more so. Mrs. Murphy's dessert manages to be invigorating as well for it contains seasonable fruits and chopped ginger in addition to 1 cup of gingerale. A number of departures from this gingerale gelatine idea may be devised, such as the use of seedless grapes and bananas in place of the suggested pears and pineapple.

Mrs. Murphy.

Gingerale Fruit Dessert.

Bring 1 cup crushed pineapple to the boiling point and dissolve in it 1½ tablespoons gelatine which has first been softened in 1 tablespoon cold water. Add 1 cup diced canned pears, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 2 tablespoons sugar (use juice of both pears and pineapple as well as solid part in measuring the fruit). Cool mixture and add 1 cup gingerale. If stronger flavor of ginger is desired, add 1 small piece of preserved ginger chopped fine. Use ¼ teaspoon salt. As mixture begins to thicken stir to distribute fruit evenly and pour into individual molds. To serve, unmold, surround with additional crushed fruits and top with whipped cream. Chopped pecan meats, chopped maraschino cherries, or a small amount of chopped preserved ginger sprinkled over top of whipped cream, adds decoration as well as delicacy of flavor. Serves eight.

Broiled Marshmallows.

Make cuts in marshmallows, insert bits of butter and jelly. Arrange on crackers and broil or bake until the marshmallows are puffy and brown.

Raspberry Suggestion.

Another $1 prize goes to Mrs. W. J. Eccleston, 1842 Columbia road northwest, for her Raspberry Ice Box Cake. For subtle delicacy of flavor, this is a fairly reasonable dessert, for when served, this type of cake invariably elicits warm enthusiasm for its richness and beauty. There are still a few raspberries on the market, but canned or frozen ones are equally adaptable and many other fruits might be substituted to blend with Mrs. Eccleston's other ingredients.

Mrs. Eccleston.

Raspberry Ice Box Cake.

Bring 1 pint sweetened raspberry juice to the boiling point, then pour over 1 package raspberry gelatine and stir until dissolved, add juice of one lemon and allow to congeal slightly. Add 2 cups chilled raspberries, canned or fresh, and ½ pt. double cream, whipped and slightly sweetened, and pour into a mold lined with 1 dozen split lady fingers. Return to refrigerator for about 4 hours. When ready to use remove from mold and serve with whipped cream—or plain if desired.

Havana Cookery Glorifies Banana In Baked Style

American Visitor Also Procures Tip on Chicken Fricassee.

Editor's note—Alvin Epstein, advertising art director of The Post, has just returned from Cuba, where he gathered some interesting information about food.

By Alvin Epstein.

TO PARAPHRASE the popular song hit, "I Went to Havana to Study the Natives." I have just returned from that florid island where I expected to at least see how the other half of our population lives. The harvest of my studies however resulted in my becoming a convert of several native Cuban dishes. Landing at Havana as the first stop of a Carribbean cruise, I was greeted with stone crabs as my initial experience in Cuban cookery. These enormous shell fish had impenetrable hard shells and were not as sweet as the smaller fry of crab which I found at Batabano. These unbelievably small soft-shelled crabs were so tiny that when I hesitatingly put in an order at the swank hotel, and inquired whether my serving would contain as many as four or six crabs, I was given a glare. I was even more amazed when my newly found amigo placed approximately three dozen baby crabs before me. As the shell had been removed from these crawfish-like crabs and a keen Tartar sauce was served, I found no difficulty in devouring my whole portion of native seafood.

Memorable Salad.

I have never tasted as memorable a dinner as the one which was flourishingly served me at Batabano. Along with the usual Presidentes (which are as Cuban as Bacardi) a bland salad of avocados, cucumbers and alligator pear was served on salad greens. This was pleasant, but no better than Washington nutriment, but when I experienced the pungent fragrance of fricasseed chicken and Spanish rice, I was converted for life. I vowed then and there to try this dish out in my own bachelor quarters once I got away from the one-room and view of the Washington Monument stage. This chicken entree was well spiced and fricasseed 'til it was tender. The rice was baked along with green peppers, onions, spices, tomatoes and fresh garden peas. When the flavor was perfectly distributed throughout both chicken and rice, the dish was served with the colorful rice ring heaped in a mound around the fowl.

Banana Dish.

Strong black coffee was passed with the fruit course but I was far too interested in the remarkable baked bananas to care about an ordinary cup of Java. Instead of bringing back Daiquiri recipes for my Washington friends, I managed to cajole a Cuban chef to bestow upon me the following recipe for baked bananas which I can safely say will stand those friends in better stead than the mildest Daiquiri or Planters Punch.

Baked Bananas with Bacon Curls.

Split four medium-sized bananas in halves lengthwise, leaving on the skin. Dot the surface of the banana thickly with two tablespoons butter or margarine, sprinkle with two tablespoons brown sugar. Slit each halved banana with three gashes apiece so that the top of the fruit will carmelize. Bake about 20 minutes or until a golden crust has formed. Serve on the half shell with crisp bacon curls as the main dish for a hot weather meal.

New Post Contest Turns Attention to Various Preserves

Preserving is as much a part of summer for many homemakers as are iced beverages and salad bowls. The end of August has been bringing forth tantalizing spicy odors from Washington kitchens. Thoughtful cooks are realizing the economy of purchasing peaches, plums, grapes, pineapples and apples now while they are reasonably priced.

A favorite tested preserve recipe will stand the opportunity of receiving one of five cash awards in the new Post recipe contest. Any type of summer fruit preserve may be entered. Entrants are eligible to send simple apple preserves or more elaborate spiced pears or green grape preserves. Mail all carefully written recipes to Alice Clayton, The Post Food Editor, before September 3. Prizes are $3 for the first award, $2 for the second, and three prizes of $1 each.

CONSUMERS COUNSEL

Suggested Menu Helps to Make Party for Bride Success.

WHAT to serve at buffet parties for brides has been a problem before the Consumers' Counsel repeatedly this month. Many hostesses called or wrote requesting information on this knotty subject, but requested that their names not appear on the food page because their parties were to be surprises to their guests of honor.

Miss Virginia Harrison, 3020 Channing street northeast, writes that all can be told now, for her surprise buffet has been given for a very blushing bride and all went well. The menu, which was suggested by The Post Food Editor, is one that may be of interest to other hostesses who want to be different in menu planning, but who are conscious of budgets and assorted appetites as well. For a late August buffet destined to serve 25 hungry dinner guests, the following menu would prove generally popular.

BUFFET SUPPER.

Punch bowl filled with chilled tomato juice cocktail
Ripe olives
Tossed fresh salad bowl—Aspic of fresh shrimps, crabmeat and lobster (substitute of canned seafood and tuna may be used)
Fried wild rice, mushrooms, livers and kidneys
Cress, buttered brown bread slices
Blanched almonds
White pillow mints
Fresh fruit punch
Chilled sliced Alberta peaches on calox leaves with thick cream
Black coffee Petits fours

Cake Recipes Requested.

Maple sugar and sirup are cooking ingredients which usually herald the sharpening of late summer appetites for early fall foods. Several inquiries have been received recently for good cake recipes. Mrs. Henry L. Larsen, 2400 Sixteenth street northwest, has inquired about cakes using maple flavoring through both cake and frosting. Here is a suggestion:

Maple Cream Cakes.

Grease 12 or 14 muffin pans of average size. Dust with flour and shake off surplus flour. Set over regulator at moderately hot, 375 degrees Fahrenheit.

Sift 2½ cups cake flour, measure and sift with 3 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon soda and ½ teaspoon salt.

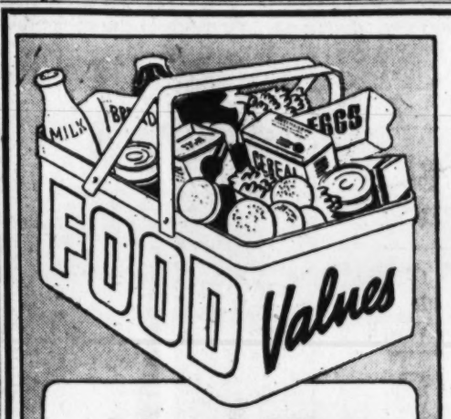

Cream ½ cup butter or similar fat, add ½ cup brown sugar, gradually creaming the while. Beat 2 eggs until thick and lemon colored. Add to the creamed mixture and mix well. Add a portion of the dry ingredients, beat until batter is smooth, no more. Add ¾ cup maple syrup and ½ cup milk, beat it in, then add more of dry ingredients. Continue alternating dry ingredients and liquids until all have been used, beating after each addition, until batter is smooth. Add ½ teaspoon vanilla. Turn into prepared pans and bake about 30 minutes. Test before removing from oven. Let stand in pan a few minutes before removing cakes. Cool before frosting. Frost with maple cream frosting and garnish each cake with a whole nut meat.

Maple Butter Frosting.

Measure 1-3 cup maple syrup and 4 tablespoons butter into the top of a double boiler. Place directly over heat until butter is melted. Stir together to blend well. Add 3 cups confectioner's sugar gradually, stirring it in as it is added.

Place over hot water and let stand 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Remove from stove. Beat 1 egg white with ¼ teaspoon salt, fold into maple and syrup mixture, add ½ teaspoon vanilla and, when cool, spread on sides and top of cake. This will be sufficient for two 8-inch layer cakes or 24-cup cakes.

Lady Lindsay Returns On Brief Capital Visit

Ambassador's Wife Interrupts Her Long Island Holiday; Aides to Swedish Crown Prince Here Receive Mementoes of Royal Favor.

By Dudley Harmon.

With her customary disregard for fanfare, Lady Lindsay, wife of the British Ambassador, slipped into town very quietly recently and is spending a few days at the embassy. Since early summer she has been visiting friends and relatives on Long Island, and no doubt will return there from Washington.

The Ambassador, Sir Ronald, has not yet decided on a date for his contemplated departure for England. He remains one of comparatively few envoys still in town. Nearly all others have long since departed for their own countries or nearby resorts, leaving their counselors and secretaries to carry on.

Of the 18 envoys accredited to this country, there remain in Washington at the present moment only the Argentine Ambassador, Felipe Espil, who gets away from the heat and humidity occasionally by dashing up to join Senora de Espil at Narragansett Pier; the Turkish envoy, Mehmet Munir Ertegun; the Mexican Ambassador, Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera; the Ecuadorean representative, Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro; the Cuban Ambassador, Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga, and the Chinese envoy, Dr. C. T. Wang, who has not taken a real vacation since his arrival in this country shortly after the outbreak of the conflict between China and Japan.

ASIDE from some very pleasant memories, Commander Hamilton V. Bryan and Col. John Crane have more tangible souvenirs of the visit early in the summer of the Swedish Crown Prince, his Princess, and young Prince Bertil. Commander Bryan and Col. Crane, who were appointed aides to the royal party, accompanied them everywhere on their tour here, and, before the visitors departed, were each given the highest decoration which the Swedish government can bestow on a military or naval personage. The recipients, however, have to wait for an act of Congress to allow them to keep the medals, a process which probably will take at least two years. With the decorations came a letter stating that upon the death of the owners, the honors must be returned immediately to the King of Sweden.

Besides this generous reward for their services, the pair received a set of gold cufflinks and a gold matchbox holder, all engraved with the royal crest.

THE INFLUX back to Washington from summer resorts is already beginning, though in a small way, as most people are remaining out of town until after Labor Day. Mrs. William Beale is expected today from Cape May, N. J., where she has been sojourning with her daughters, Mrs. William T. Mann and Miss Barbara Beale. Mrs. Mann and her sister will return Tuesday from the New Jersey resort.

* * * *

ODDS AND ENDS: Mrs. Rose Saul Montgomery is the guest of her mother, Mrs. B. F. Saul, at her summer home in nearby Maryland, and will probably remain over the week-end. Mrs. Montgomery, who prefers to live most of the year in New York, has been a frequent visitor on Long Island this summer . . . Bachelor-about-town Pendleton Turner, is visiting Mrs. Frederick English at Ventnor, N. J. . . . Donald Downs, another bachelor, who spent most of last summer abroad, is again in Europe, spending most of his time at Vichy. With the European situation what it is, most Americans who had intended going to Czechoslovakian resorts for cures have ended up at Vichy or other French watering places. Mr. Downs is not expected to return to his home near McLean, Va., until November

Sarah Warren's Bow Tomorrow

Her Grandmother Will Present Her in Party at Warrenton.

Debutantes are now being presented in Warrenton, Va., as well as in Newport and on Long Island, with Miss Sarah Marshall Warren scheduled to make her official appearance at a party tomorrow at the Warrenton Country Club. She will be presented by her grandmother, Mrs. William C. Marshall, and it is expected that about 200 members of the younger set will be on hand for the affair, coming, many of them, from out of town to attend. She will later make a second bow at the Bachelor's Cotillon in Baltimore in December.

The debutante-to-be is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Mack Warren, of Baltimore. Her mother was formerly Miss Sallie Marshall, of Warrenton, and her grandfather, the late William C. Marshall was a direct descendant of Chief Justice John Marshall, of Oak Hill, Fauquier County. Her father, originally a Chicagoan, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Warren.

Assisting at the party will be Miss Warren's two godmothers, Mrs. Frederick Haserick and Mrs. George Lawrence, and also Mrs. Douglas Lees.

Following the event at the Country Club, she will leave on Sunday for Baltimore, where she will attend numerous affairs scheduled for the coming week. She will be back in Warrenton for the horse show there on September 9 and 10.

Mrs. Frederick Haserick entertained at luncheon for her yesterday, and on Wednesday evening she was honored at a party given at Frederick, Md. Mrs. George Lawrence was also her hostess at a tea recently.

Miss Warren was graduated from the Roland Park Country School this June and has been spending the summer in Warrenton with her grandmother.

Mrs. Leonard Is Off To Massachusetts; Then to Colorado

After spending a few days at her home in Georgetown, Mrs. Henry Leonard has departed for the North Shore of Massachusetts to visit until the end of the month. Then she will go to her ranch in Colorado, where she and Maj. Leonard spend the greater part of every summer.

The Leonards will not return to Washington until late in October. In addition to their Colorado ranch, Maj. and Mrs. Leonard own a farm at Blithewood, Md.

Washington Girl To Launch Ship

Miss Ellen Gudger Will Break Bottle on New Naval Vessel.

Miss Ellen Gudger, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Emmett Gudger, will break the bottle of champagne against the prow of the Navy ship Helena when it is launched tomorrow on the Hudson River at Kearny, N. J.

Miss Gudger is already in New York with her mother and her younger sister, Gloria, and Capt. Gudger will join the family in time for the ceremonies tomorrow. As her maid of honor at the christening, Miss Gudger will have Katharine Bulkley, daughter of Senator Robert Bulkley. Miss Gudger's grandfather, the late Senator Thomas F. Walsh, of Montana, and Senator Bulkley were close friends.

Housekeepers Arrange For Rides to Meetings

Members With Autos Will Call for Those Lacking Transportation; Alliance's First Year Book Will Be Out Soon.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

No member of the Housekeepers' Alliance will be obliged to stay home from a meeting because of lack of a car of her own this season. A transportation committee, headed by Mrs. Lloyd A. Morrison and Miss Abby Johnson, has been appointed through which members with cars will arrange to call for those who have none, making going and coming easier for all and assuring rides for everyone.

Announcement of the plan was made yesterday at a meeting of the executive board, held at the home of the president, Mrs. Frederick Newburgh, 7105 Chatham road, Chevy Chase, Md. Plans for the season were discussed and final material was assembled for the club's first yearbook which soon is to be issued, with Miss Ellen Collins, second vice president, in charge.

Announcement also was made of the appointment of Miss Janet Richards, honorary member of the alliance and dean of current events lecturers, as chairman of the committee on international relations. It was decided that the president, for convenience, should act as program chairman, conferring with the chairman of committees, to each of whom one program is delegated during her two-year term of office.

Club Season to Open October 18

The club will have its first meeting October 18 at the home of Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, civic chairman, who will arrange the program. Preceding that, there will be a garden bridge tea sponsored by the ways and means committee for the benefit of the club. Mrs. Frank M. Shortall, chairman of the committee, is in charge, and will be assisted by Mrs. George Beckert, Miss Lizzie Bassett, Miss Lillian Blade, Mrs. Amy A. Buston, Mrs. Lyman B. Kleber and Mrs. J. E. Atkinson. The place has not been selected.

There was discussion of a change in the meeting date of the alliance from the third Tuesday of each month, which has been its day in previous seasons. Some of the members have suggested that another time would be more convenient and Mrs. Newburgh yesterday requested that their suggestions be sent to Mrs. Tilman Bacon Parks, chairman of revisions, to be reported on at the opening meeting.

The board selected two alternates for the directors to the District Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. Johan C. Kondrup and Mrs. J. Smith Tassin are the directors and the alternates chosen were Mrs. Lyle Lipscomb and Mrs. Theodore Holdcamper.

Mrs. Newburgh, who is a member of the year book committee of the federation, reported a ready response from local merchants in giving advertising for the book and said honorable mention for obtaining the most advertisements probably would come to the alliance. Mrs. Ruth Snodgrass, one of the members of the alliance board, is chairman of the federation yearbook committee.

Subjects of interest to homemakers are the theme of the programs for the Housekeepers' Alliance. These concern legislation as well as matters more directly connected with the home.

Miss Ruth Atwater Gives Short Talk

Yesterday, Miss Ruth Atwater, director of home economics for the National Canners' Association and vice chairman of the club's committee on the American home, was present at the meeting. She is seldom able to attend, because her work takes her out of Washington on frequent trips.

Her branch of service for the canning industry is all research, she told the members in a short talk following the business meeting. It deals in pure chemistry, bacteriology, physics and heat penetration, the laboratory findings which are made available to housewives and schools through her office. She travels 30,000 miles a year making talks before women's clubs and student groups, she said.

A new laboratory kitchen for testing recipes for canned food has just been opened at 1739 H street. The laboratory, maintained in Washington since 1913, is one of several in the United States, she said.

Officers and committee chairmen present yesterday were: Mrs. Henry Fenno Sawtelle, first vice president; Mrs. Lipscomb, fourth vice president; Mrs. Kondrup, treasurer and chairman of printing; Mrs. R. King Stone, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Edward Maloney, recording secretary; Miss Abby Johnson, auditor; Mrs. Sarah Nevins, chaplain; Mrs. J. E. Atkinson, vice chaplain; Mrs. Anson Rogers Tracy, vice chairman of the committee on sanitation and health; Mrs. Wiley, chairman of the committee on civics and historian for the club; Mrs. Ruth Snodgrass, publicity chairman, and Mrs. Morrison.

"My visit to Washington was one of the brightest spots in America," she wrote.

It was reported at the luncheon that Mrs. Nell Hysong is recuperating from a recent illness at her summer home at Broadwater-on-the-Bay.

Many cards were read from Soroptimists who are vacationing in various parts of the country, among them was one from Mrs. Betty Jones in Estes Park, Colo., and from Miss Grace Thompson, who spent a vacation in Alaska in the company of Mrs. Laura Waters.

Mrs. Newman will entertain the Soroptimists at her country home near Alexandria next month.

Bedtime Stories

By Thornton W. Burgess.

The Pitfall.

Pitfalls lie in wait for all;
Watch your step lest you shall fall.
—Old Mother Nature.

Teeny Weeny, known among his neighbors as The Littlest One, couldn't have known that four pairs of sharp eyes were watching for him, but had he known he couldn't possibly have more cleverly gone about his business and still kept out of sight. The four pairs of watching eyes belonged to Tommy, Sue and Sammy and the Old Naturalist. Sue had previously caught just a fleeting glimpse of what she had supposed to be a baby Mouse. The Old Naturalist had smilingly told her that she was mistaken.

"It was Teeny Weeny, otherwise The Littlest One," he had said, and then had suggested that they all keep perfectly still and watch for another glimpse of the mite in fur.

But their watching was in vain. Once a leaf mysteriously turned over although not a breath of air was stirring, and once there was a faint rustle of dry leaves under a bit of brush.

At last, the Old Naturalist spoke. "I guess," said he, "if you really want to see him we will have to catch him."

"But you haven't told us yet who Teeny Weeny really is," cried Sue.

"Haven't I?" replied the Old Naturalist, pretending surprise. "Why Teeny Weeny is a Shrew, one of the smallest members of the family but not quite the smallest. He is known by three names. There are Common Shrew, Masked Shrew and Cooper's Shrew."

"What is a Shrew? Is it a kind of Mouse?" Sammy wanted to know.

The Old Naturalist shook his head. "It is no more a Mouse than a Rat is a kind of squirrel," said he. "Shrews are a family by themselves. Some of them sometimes are mistaken for Mice and some for Moles. But they are neither, just Shrews, and the one we have been watching for is next to the smallest of the family in America, hardly as big as one of my little fingers. He held up one. "It is," he added, "among the mammals, or animals as most folks call them, what the Hummingbird is among birds."

"I would love to see one," said Sue with a little sigh.

"I guess perhaps that can be arranged," said the Old Naturalist.

He poked around on a shelf and presently brought forth a glass jar, an empty pickle jar. "I think this will do," said he.

"Do for what?" asked Sammy curiously.

"To catch Teeny Weeny in," was the reply.

Sue and Sammy looked puzzled, but Tommy grinned for he knew what the Old Naturalist was planning. "It is a pitfall," he explained, which really was no explanation at all to Sue and Sammy.

"Come with me," said the Old Naturalist and led the way to where a rather slim pole had lain for so long that when it was lifted it left a depression for its whole length, sort of a sunken little path or runway over which grass hung more or less. Midway of this the Old Naturalist dug a hole just big enough and deep enough to hold that jar so that the open top was level with the ground at the bottom of the runway. The overhanging grass was extra thick right here and the shadow of a big stump fell across that spot so that the runway was darker just there than elsewhere.

"Now we will go away for a while," said the Old Naturalist. "We may not catch Teeny Weeny this afternoon, but if we don't he will be almost certain to tumble into that jar during the night. You see he dearly loves to scamper along a little runway such as we made by taking up that pole."

"How do you know he'll find it?" Sammy wanted to know.

"I don't, but I shall be surprised if he doesn't. He had to travel about a lot to get enough to eat and sooner or later he will find that little runway I am sure. If it is in the daytime he will scamper along it as fast as he can for the place there is the least light and so the least chance of being seen by an enemy. That is where our pitfall is. Well go away from here now and later we will see what we will see."

Politics occupied the attention of members of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the National Rural Letter Carriers' Association last night. Phinney, Bentonville, Ark., treasurer; Mrs. Roy Gwinn, Morrisville, Mo., and Mrs. R. E. Greathouse, Wilmore, Ky., board members.

John Q. Barnes, of Des Moines, postal paymaster for Iowa, and J. Ed Cooper, superintendent of rural mails, were among the speakers on yesterday's program. The plan of establishing a home for aged carriers on the Georgia homestead of Thomas E. Watson, "father of the rural mails," was presented before the auxiliary by Gordon Thompson, of Georgia. Action will be taken on the proposal today.

Music for yesterday's session was provided by Miss Mildred Cooper, daughter of the superintendent of rural mails, and Mrs. H. A. Via, of Virginia, who sang, and Miss Frances Yingling, of Maryland, who presented piano selections.

Mrs. Greathouse yesterday entertained representatives of the States under her supervision, at a breakfast at Wesley Hall. Two other breakfasts also were given there, one by the Illinois delegation, including its band; and another by the past national officers' club, with Mrs. F. K. Markline, of Whitehall, Md., past national secretary, in charge.

This morning the New England delegates will have breakfast together in the coffee shop of the hotel and the North Carolina delegation at Sholl's Cafe.

The Minnesota delegation held a banquet last night aboard the S. S. Potomac, on their trip down the river.

Several of the women's groups met last night preparatory to the election today. The Junior Auxiliary members held a dance in the garden room. They will nominate and elect their officers today.

Paris Streets Show Revived

Plans for "Streets of Paris," second annual alley party of the Women's City Club, were discussed yesterday at a committee meeting at the clubhouse, 726 Jackson place, called by Miss Marjorie Webster, the president. It will be given the evening of September 16.

The first alley party was a "Cotton Carnival," held last year with much success under the direction of Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, then president. The broad alley behind the club grounds was the setting, as it will be this year. The "Thieves Market" will offer a large selection of wares, donated by members. This will be in charge of Misss Jessie Lane and Mrs. Frances Williams. There will be a sidewalk cafe, with Miss Nell Price as proprietor; games in charge of Mrs. Gus Schuldt; refreshments, Mrs. Edgar Brown, and decorations, Mrs. Frederick I. Swift.

A scene in the poor section of Paris will be duplicated, with quilts hanging out of the windows and clothes on the line. Mrs. Laura Waters wil be in charge of posters; Miss Lois Garlock, tickets; Mrs. George B. Hartman, cards; Mrs. John Bennett, program.

The affair is sponsored by the ways and means committee, of which Miss Elva McNamara is chairman and Mrs. Wiley vice chairman.

Among numbers on the program will be dramatic skits by Mrs. Sylvia Ziskind and Miss Florence McCracken; songs by Mrs. Stella Arseneau, accompanied by Miss Alice Thomas, and solo dances by Betty Hill Wardwell.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

If you got the top New Dealers into your living room (they could be squeezed comfortably into an average room, with some sitting on the floor) a few would shoot craps, some would play poker or bridge, a few would listen to the radio, there'd be a groun srguing politics loudly in a corner, most of them would want a drink, and a few would eat a piece of fudge.

Henderson . . . New Deal type?

Probably three of them would be looking for a tenor, to do a little singing . . . Sooner or later most of them would prick up their ears and get into the political argument . . . A few would get violent, almost call each other names; some would kid the pants off each other's ideas, or demand that "you define your terms." Then they'd drift into the crap game, maybe.

* * * *

If there were a good-looking blonde or brunette present (or even a red-head) one or two of them might ooze into the bookroom or out on the terrace for a little gallantry or a little necking . . . Some would go home thinking some of the others were tories or bolsheviks, and all would be convinced they hadn't expressed their points of view very skillfully in the rehash an hour later, dozing off in bed.

"—might argue or shoot craps"

As at an army headquarters, not all the New Dealers have the rank of major general . . . Occasionally a smart lieutenant (who's a good bridge player), or a brilliant captain, or a major who's a bit of a genius, crashes the strategy board. Personality plays its part, or zeal, or the happy accident of bringing in a pitcher of lemonade at the right moment.

* * * *

Who are the New Dealers? You can say there are 4, or 40, or 400, if you scratch deeply enough; you'd have a tough time finding 400 who could walk over the red-hot plowshares without scorching the balls of their feet or qualify without stretching in the bed of Procrustes.

* * * *

There's only one New Dealer who's precisely 100 per cent; you know his name . . . It's almost as dangerous to be a 120 per cent New Dealer as a 79 per cent New Dealer . . . Some of them flash across the skies like meteors and are gone; but while they flame they certainly flame.

* * * *

No one agrees which are the Grade A New Dealers and the Grade B New Dealers. It's useless to try to grade them. They don't wear stars or eagles on their shoulders, and there are some stenographers in Washington who are more influential New Dealers than some Cabinet members.

* * * *

Hopkins, Ickes, Wallace, Corcoran? Yes; but do they all rank above Capt. Joe Patterson, the publisher; Judge Roseman, Felix Frankfurter or Joe Kennedy? Are Bill (SEC) Douglas, Ben Cohen, Thurman (Monopoly) Arnold and Bob Jackson, the Solicitor General, No. 1 or No. 2 New Dealers?

"—extra leaves in the round table"

And where would you rank Adolph Berle, Jerome (SEC) Frank, Lowell Mellett or Leon Henderson? Are Justice Hugo Black, Senators Wagner and Minton and Mme. Perkins in the inner circle still? Or ever? Are many of these more potent than Steve Early, Marvin McIntyre and Miss LeHand, who have absorbed the New Deal through their pores? And where does Mrs. Roosevelt rank?

* * * *

What kind of New Dealers are John L. Lewis, Secretary Henry Morgenthau, Homer Cummings, Jimmy Roosevelt and Jesse Jones, who help make it work? (Or do they, or does it work?) Could you say that Justice Ferdinand Pecora (who might be a New Deal Supreme Court Justice some day) or Mike Strauss, the publicity wizard; or Nathan Straus, the slum clearer, are really among the top New Dealers?

* * * *

None of these seems more important than were Hugh Johnson, Rex Tugwell, Prof. Warren and Ray Moley in their day; and where are they now? There are rumors of brilliant New Dealers deep in the fastnesses of AAA and WPA who might emerge any day . . . Some work far away from the limelight, which sometimes makes bogeymen of them . . . How many extra leaves can you put in the Roosevelt Round Table and still keep it a round table? Some day maybe I'll know enough to rank them from A to Z—or not to try to.

$2,000,000 Is Asked for Clean Rivers

100 Leaders Unanimously Resolve to Urge PWA Loan.

Silver Spring Meeting Calls for Action Immediately.

Organizing to eliminate pollution from suburban streams and tributaries of the Potomac, almost 100 leaders, representing about 40 civic groups in Montgomery and Prince Georges County, last night adopted a resolution urging the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission to seek a $2,000,000 PWA loan.

The resolution was adopted unanimously at a meeting called at the Jessup Blair Community House in Silver Spring. The meeting was presided over by Dr. William B. Holton, president of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase branch of the Izaak Walton League.

"It is the opinion of th representatives of the civic associations here assembled that the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission be urged to take advantage of PWA funds at once to accomplish all necessary steps to completely eliminate sewage pollution from the waters under its jurisdiction," the resolution said.

Without Dissent.

After W. F. Mulligan, of Berwyn, Md., had introduced the measure, its adoption without a dissenting vote followed.

Speakers at last night's meeting, besides Dr. Holton, who occupied the chair, included Dr. Lewis Radcliffe, president of the Izaak Walton League regional council for the District, Maryland and Virginia, and Abner L. Roe, chairman of the regional council pollution committee.

Maj. John Blake Gordon, director of sanitary engineering for the District, attended as a representative of the District Commissioners, and spoke briefly, as an observer only. Another speaker was I. M. Glace, of the Potomac Valley Pollution Conference, whose headquarters are in Harrisburg, Pa.

Problem Widespread.

Glace pointed out that while the problem in nearby Maryland and the District was serious, the same conditions existed in several other large cities along rivers.

The men and women who attended pledged themselves to bring as much pressure to bear on the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission as possible to force it to apply for the loan.

Exact cost of the program to eliminate pollution has not yet been determined, but such a project, according to Dr. Holton, would be accomplished with about $2,000,000.

This amount, he pointed out, could include funds to connect the sewers now draining into Rock Creek and Little Falls Branch with the District of Columbia system, and to built a sewage disposal plant on the upper reaches of the Anacostia River.

On September 9 a committee from the Izaak Walton League will confer with the commission.

Forts Rise Like Mushrooms Under New Concrete Process

Fifty tons of concrete pillbox sprang up in seven hours yesterday in the Bureau of Standards backyard and gave food for thought to military experts of the United States and half a dozen foreign nations.

The miniature fortress was erected by a crew under supervision of Karl P. Billner, Swedish-American engineer, as the first demonstration of the possible military importance of his newly patented vacuum concrete process.

His invention for drawing superfluous water from drying concrete, when operated by experienced men, will cut construction time for a pillbox from three to four days to three or four hours, Billner says.

Concrete defenses for a suddenly threatened position could be erected overnight by the new process, the inventor believes, affording bombproof shelter to machine gun and antiaircraft crews.

Shelter for 30.

Approximately 20 feet long, 10 feet high and 10 feet wide at the base, the pillbox erected yesterday could accommodate 30 men standing upright. Three embrasures in the 12-inch olive gray walls added warlike realism to the scene behind the bureau's wind tunnel.

Billner furnished at his own expense all materials for the demonstration of his invention, but declined to be quoted on the cost of the sample fortress. "It would sound too ridiculously cheap," he said.

The vacuum concrete process, he explained, reduces strain on the construction forms from the pressure of freshly poured concrete to a small fraction of its intensity under ordinary concrete construction methods. By utilizing atmospheric pressure for supporting the forms and consolidating the concrete's internal texture, Billner claims his invention increases a structure's strength by 50 per cent.

Easily Transported.

Wooden forms were used for yesterday's job, but Billner says thin steel or aluminum sheets can be used when the construction technique has been "standardized," thus making it possible for the necessary equipment to be transported easily in battle areas.

More than 400 persons, including high Army and Navy officers and representatives of China, Italy, Russia, France and Mexico, saw the pillbox at various stages of construction.

Soft-Drink Pickets Arrested, but Win Their Point in Va.

Three Washington men who picketed an Alexandria carnival to protest sale of a soft drink were successful yesterday even though they were arrested for trespassing and disorderly conduct.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars, sponsoring the carnival, withdrew sale of the drink after the men were taken into custody. Charges were brought after they were warned to leave the premises.

The men gave their names as William Carter, of the 700 block of Sixth street northwest; Theodore Economou, of the 900 block of Thirteenth street northeast, and Charles Hern, of the 600 block of Pennsylvania avenue northwest. They said they were truck drivers and members of the Beer and Soda Water Drivers Union, Local No. 67.

Alexandrian Is Named To Apprentice Council

Richmond, Va., Aug. 25 (AP).—Gov. Price today appointed the six members of the new Virginia Apprenticeship Council established by the 1938 General Assembly to promote the training of skilled labor in the State. Included was Emmet C. Davison of Alexandria, appointed for a three year term.

Truck Backs Over Head of Snoozer On Parking Lot

It cost Daniel Perry, 32, colored, of 1024 Sixteenth street northeast, 16 stitches in the head to snatch a nap on a parking lot last night.

Perry selected the Kahn warehouse lot, at Canal street and Delaware avenue southeast, for a snooze. While he was sleeping, Philip Leo Shepsle, 18, a Kahn driver, backed his truck into the lot, over Perry's head, and went his way without knowing he had interrupted a nap.

Perry went to Providence Hospital to have his head sewed up after a pedestrian discovered him walking near the lot with blood streaming from his wounds.

Md. University's Editors Decline To Enter Politics

Decision of Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, to support Representative Lewis in the senatorial race will not influence the "hands-off" policy of The Diamondback, student newspaper.

Editor Larry Hoover, of Takoma Park, received a letter yesterday asking that the paper publish a denial of Senator Tydings' charge the C. I. O. was contributing to Lewis' campaign. The letter bore the signature of David J. Lewis.

Hoover, who is the son of Principal Hoover of Central High School, stated:

"The Diamondback will maintain a hands-off policy in State politics."

Silver Spring Neighbors Join To Replace House Fire Leveled

Taking their cue from the colonial pioneers, residents of Silver Spring, Md., will pitch in tomorrow to build a home for John A. Trageser and his family of eight, to replace the one burned down four months ago.

Twenty-two volunteer carpenters, mechanics, and laborers will start the project at 8 a. m., near Four Corners, Md., just off the Wheaton road, and by sundown hope to have the house complete, with plumbing, electricity, fixtures and trimmings. Furniture, also contributed by friends and neighbors, will be placed in the proper spots.

Four months ago the Tragesers and their seven children, all under 14, were comfortably living in their newly built house, when a fire consumed it and most of their possessions. Immediately Silver Spring residents opened a funds campaign to assist the family. Meanwhile, Trageser, 35, a garage mechanic, moved his family into the home of his mother, Mrs. Benjamin F. Adams, of Silver Spring.

Tomorrow, following the "house raising," not only will the home and furniture become the property of the Tragesers, but deed to the land will be turned over to them by Mr. and Mrs. Adams.

Cabmen's Hope Of Own Surety Firm Is Dashed

Only 75 Attend Rally Called by New Taxi Drivers' Union.

Hopes for formation this week of a driver-managed mutual insurance company were extinguished last night when only 75 taxi operators appeared at an "open mass meeting" called at Heurich's gymnasium, Twenty-sixth and Water streets northwest, by the newly chartered drivers' union, Local 447.

With the new compulsory liability law taking effect Sunday, organizers of the meeting had looked for a sufficiently heavy attendance so that drivers could be signed up on the spot and the company formally incorporated today.

"You'll have to go ahead and get insurance with one of the private companies now," John Keane, labor attorney, told the drivers, "but remember that as this union grows we will have plenty of chances to form our own mutual company."

Charles B. McClosky, vice president of the Central Labor Union, declared that "within a few days, 130,000 American Federation of Labor members in Washington will be instructed to patronize only union-driven cabs." Consideration of the mutual insurance company proposal will be taken up at another drivers' meeting next week, he announced.

U. S. May Adopt Relay System In Air Fighting

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

The War Department is developing plans to use multiple crews aboard Army planes in case of war to increase the corps' efficiency by permitting the aircraft to operate on a "round-the-clock" basis except for refueling and repairs, it was learned tonight.

Development of modern, long-range, high-speed planes and the inability of Army fliers engaged in war missions to fly more than an average of four hours out of each 24, has given rise to the theory that the planes could be used 24 hours daily by employing separate crews on a relay basis, it was said.

Under the plan, it would be possible theoretically to increase a plane's efficiency six times, by assigning relay crews to a plane at four-hour intervals. If the studies are successful, they may result in substantial boost in the Army's present air corps personnel.

Army Will Move Finance School to Holabird Depot

The Army Finance School, with a staff of 12 officers and enlisted men and 40 students, will be moved immediately from Washington to Holabird Depot, Baltimore, Md., because of insufficient office space here, it was announced yesterday by the War Department.

Simultaneous with the transfer, the department assigned Maj. A. O. Walsh, recently returned from service in the Philippines, to take charge of the school. He succeeds Maj. A. J. Perry, F. D., who has completed a four-year tour as commandant.

The school will continue under direct supervision of Maj. Gen. Frederick W. Boschen, Chief of Finance, and students will have the same opportunity for observing operations of the Finance Office in Washington, officials said.

Established in 1920, the school has trained 911 enlisted men.

Traffic Chief Asks Cash for New Signals

Seeks Modern System, 2 Motor Inspection Plants Here.

$348,320 Requested by Van Duzer for 1940 Fiscal Year.

To provide the District with a system of modern traffic signals and to operate the two new motor vehicle inspection plants, besides the regular funds needed to carry on the work of the traffic department, Director William A. Van Duzer requested $348,320 yesterday for the 1940 fiscal year.

For purchasing new traffic light signals and equipment, Van Duzer asked $47,000, a $22,000 increase over this year's appropriation. He said traffic surveys showed there are over 190 intersections where traffic-light signals would be justified.

$83,900 Estimated.

Next year, being the first when the compulsory motor vehicle inspection law is effective, money for the construction of the new inspection plants and equipment was supplied in the 1939 fiscal year's deficiency bill. A sum of $154,720 was appropriated for this work.

For 1940, Director Van Duzer estimates $83,900 will be required to operate the inspection stations. They are located at Twelfth and E streets southwest, and on West Virginia avenue northeast, just north of Mount Olivet road.

All personnel for the stations will have been appointed and assigned to duty in time for instruction and training before the start of actual inspections on March 1, 1939, Van Duzer stated.

At the same time the National Capital Park and Planning Commission asked the District Commissioners for $300,000 as their reimbursement to the Federal Government.

Indebted for Loans.

The act of May 29, 1930, provided that the District of Columbia reimburse the United States Government at the rate of $1,000,000 for acquisition of land within the District, for park, parkway and playground purposes by the Park and Planning Commission.

This reimbursement provision was amended later so as to require the District to reimburse the Federal Government at a rate not less than $300,000 per year during the years the District was indebted to the Government for PWA loans.

For salaries the traffic director requested $94,800, an increase of only $2,480 over the present appropriation. Maintenance expenses, including the purchase of light signals and controls will require $149,620, an increase of $48,410 over the present sum.

I may be dead wrong, which would occasion no surprise, but the reports that Mickey Cochrane will move into Boston next season as manager of the Red Sox, causing Joe Cronin to move out, savor of somebody's pipe dream.

POVICH.

The story as the "reliable reports" have it is that Cochrane will be hired by Tom Yawkey who will buy up the remaining year of Cronin's managerial contract which runs through 1939, and install Cochrane as his manager. Cronin, of course, would revert to the Nats as manager or vice president or in some other capacity at the elbow of his pappy-in-law, Clark Griffith.

There are a couple of reasons why the story doesn't strike us as too plausible. And not the primary reason is the fact that Yawkey, in order to swing that little deal, would have to separate himself from $30,000 which would be the cost of buying up Cronin's iron-clad contract. Cronin's contract, as you may remember, is no ordinary baseball contract.

Unlike Mickey Cochrane, who was sacked at Detroit on ten days' notice, and unlike Wes Ferrell, who was given ten-days' pay and fired by Clark Griffith, Cronin operates under a contract that is not subject to the whims and moods of the club owner. One of the provisions of the deal in which Cronin was sold to Boston was the erasure of the ten-day clause in his contract. Clark Griffith insisted on that before agreeing to break down and take a quarter million dollars of Yawkey's money for his son-in-law's services.

Yawkey Has Cause for Pause

Thirty thousand dollars may be no staggering sum to Yawkey who cannot count on the fingers of both hands the Wall Street directorates to which he is attached, but it is 30,000 bucks nevertheless. And Yawkey has already sunk more than $3,000,000 in his Boston baseball venture. There is great doubt that he has worked up a $30,000 dislike for Cronin and a fondness of similar value for Cochrane.

It would seem, though, that this year, of all seasons, is not the proper time to instigate a "Fire Cronin" movement at Boston. In previous seasons, that idea gained something of a foothold and Cronin's release would hardly have outraged the Boston public. But this, as the saying goes, is another year.

This year, for the first time since he paid the $250,000 for Cronin, Yawkey has begun to reap some dividends on the deal. Cronin has been playing grand ball for Boston. That transplanted bit of Old Erin has gone mildly over the exploits of the Pacific Coast Irishman this year. He has been a power on the Red Sox's offense all season and again has taken rank as the best fielding shortstop in the league. It was fairly significant, too, when, a couple of weeks ago, Cronin was voted the most popular shortstop in baseball in a Nation-wide vote conducted by a cereal firm.

And another thing. When all the votes are counted, Joe Cronin may be the fellow convicted of doing the best managerial job in the American League this season. He has the Red Sox up there in fair security in second place and they are winging. In the Red Sox's darkest hour, with Lefty Grove on the sidelines and a pitching staff that otherwise ranks with the worst in the league, Cronin has his club clicking.

Beautiful Friendships

Not only that, but the Yawkey-Cronin alliance has all the earmarks of a beautiful friendship. The infant son of the Red Sox manager was named for Yawkey. Yawkey has consistently maintained throughout the dismal years of Cronin and the Red Sox that he has never regretted the purchase price he paid for his manager.

Of course, the Mickey Cochrane-Walter O. Briggs combination in Detroit was supposed to have been based on a beautiful friendship, too, and look what happened to that. Cochrane was fired virtually without notice. But Yawkey, unlike Briggs, is a baseball man. He doesn't think in terms of assembly lines and overtime pay. He is able to regard failures in baseball with more tolerance. He is able to appreciate that Cronin, in keeping the half-shot Red Sox up there in second place, is doing a whale of a job.

Cochrane, of course, had a sensational managerial record at Detroit where he won two pennants and finished second twice in four years. Bue he was fired because the Tigers this year were running a poor fifth. In the season when Cronin was enjoying his greatest success as a manager, Cochrane was experiencing his worst. It doesn't add up that Yawkey would be willing to swap managers, especially in view of the fact that the Tigers were expected to finish no worse than second this year while the Red Sox were a doubtful first-division possibility.

May Join Sox as Catcher

The more reasonable possibility is that Cochrane, if he is hired by Yawkey in any capacity, would be engaged as a player, not a player-manager. Mickey has often expressed a desire to re-don the catcher's spangles and the Red Sox are in need of a catcher.

The lure of the game must be strong, indeed, for Cochrane. X-ray pictures of his cracked skull resemble a road map full of detours. Physicians have warned him against return to the game as a player. For more than a year, Owner Briggs also expressly forbade him to catch, but finally capitulated to Cochrane's insistence.

In any eventuality, Joe Cronin would not be jobless. Even if fired at Boston, he could walk right into a job with the Nats and in his pockets he could rattle $30,000 that Yawkey would be forced to pay him for the pleasure of firing him. But, as I was saying, I don't think that will come to pass. Not this year, anyway. Because it's hard to find a reason for firing Cronin this year, and Yawkey is a logical sort of fellow.

Toe-Dunking, Smiles and Meditation as Redskins Rest After Practice

Zeke Bonura Hits Homer To Tie Game

4th Place Held Clinched; Cleveland Loses Twin Bill to Yankees.

By Shirley Povich.

Performing a highly successful seven-hit job on the Detroit Tigers, Pete Appleton yesterday pitched the Nats into a firmer grip on fourth place and conjured new visions of a third-place finish for the Washington athletes.

While Appleton was frustrating the Tigers, 8 to 2, the third-place Cleveland Indians were taking a double licking from the Yankees in New York, receding to within six games of the Nats. The Washingtons lengthened their margin over the fifth-place Tigers to 2½ games.

Restored to a starting role after two years as a relief specialist, Appleton turned in his second consecutive victory and dealt the Tigers their third straight defeat. He was seriously annoyed by the Tigers in only two innings and left ten of the Detroit athletes holding the collective bags.

Nats Get 12 Hits.

Staked to an early lead by potent hitting, Appleton gave the Tigers little encouragement after the fifth inning. In fact, there was an utter lack of Detroit hits from the fifth inning until Dixie Walker singled with two out in the ninth. Hank Greenberg, Charley Gehringer and Rudy York, the big shots in the Detroit batting order, were able to muster only one hit among them.

Meanwhile, the Nats were revenging themselves against Harry Eisenstat, the rookie left-hander who had contrived to beat 'em on three previous occasions this season. Eisenstat lasted the nine-inning route only by grace of the patience and tolerance of Manager Del Baker.

Twelve hits spouted from the Nats' bats against Eisenstat and they weren't trifling much with the one-base variety. Zeke Bonura found time to insert his sixteenth home run of the season and George Case, Cecil Travis and Sammy West swatted three-baggers. Ossie Bluege, Buddy Lewis and Pete Appleton chimed in with two-baggers.

Tigers Led in Second.

At one point in the proceedings—the second inning—the Tigers held a brief, 1-0 lead which evolved from Fox's double to leftfield, but Zeke Bonura reclaimed that run almost immediately by banging a long drive into the left-field bleachers. Before the inning was over, Cecil Travis had singled and Bluege had doubled against the left center wall and the Nats had a 2-1 lead.

Travis greeted Eisenstat with a triple to the center field corner in the fourth and the 5,000 customers were aghast a bit later when Charley Gehringer fumbled a grounder off West's bat. Travis held third, but scored a moment later on Ferrell's single to left and West followed him home while Christman was throwing out Appleton.

That 4-1 lead was reduced to 4-2 in the Tigers' fifth when the first three men to face Appleton singled. But with only one out and a walk to Greenberg filling the bases, Appleton escaped cleverly by forcing York to pop up and Fox to ground out.

Greenberg Pops Out.

A pair of Tiger errors following West's single upped the Nats' lead to 5-2 in the sixth, and in the seventh, after passing Walker and Gehringer with one out, Appleton put down another Tiger threat by forcing Greenberg to pop up and causing York to line out to Simmons.

Buddy Lewis' double to left and Al Simmons' single produced the sixtu Washington run in the seventh, and in the eighth there were such items as West's triple against the leftfield wall, Appleton's double against the centerfield wall and Case's triple against the wall in left-center, which accounted for the Nats' last two runs.

And, as we were saying, Appleton allowed only one hit in the last four innings.

Yanks Crush Indians, Taking Pair, 5-2, 15-3

Gomez Bests Whitehill in Mound Duel in Opener; DiMaggio and Dickey Hit Home Runs.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 25.—The Yankees put the crusher on the Indians, today. Before 40,692 fans the league leaders swept a double-header, 5 to 2 and 15 to 3.

Lefty Gomez bested Earl Whitehill in a duel of left-handers in the opener to win his fourteenth triumph of the season and Red Ruffing hung up No. 18 as he breezed home in the nightcap behind an 11-hit barrage which included the year's twenty-fifth home runs for Bill Dickey and Joe DiMaggio.

Johnny Allen, the Tribe's star right-hander had a one-hitter going into the Yankee sixth. Joe Gordon walked, went to second on a passed ball and scored when Ruffing doubled down the rightfield line. After that the Yanks batted around and scored five more runs on three hits, a walk, an error and a fly.

The Tribe scored three runs in the first of the seventh on Hal Trosky's eighteenth homer of the season. But in their half, the Yanks batted around again and scored seven runs, three of them coming in on Dickey's four bagger. DiMaggio cracked his twenty-fifth with Henrich aboard in the eighth.

Ruffing, except for the sixth, was superb. The Indians got only two hits outside that frame and Red fanned seven.

Gomez was just as good. The Tribe got two runs off him with the help of an error in the first inning of the opener, but after that couldn't score. The champions got the two runs back in their half of the first on Red Rolfe's homer and picked up single runs in the third, fourth and sixth to win.

5 Redskins Are 'Fired'

Flaherty Trims Roster as Drills Continue.

An additional bloc of five players yesterday was marked for shipment to other clubs or outright release from the Redskins as Coach Ray Flaherty pared the roster to 31 players, one over the limit of 30 men which becomes effective immediately after playing the opening game.

Flaherty reluctantly forwarded the names of Johnny Spirida, "Rink" Bond, Red Elder, Milton Johnson and Charley Payne to League Prexy Joe Carr, asking waivers on them. Four of the group are backs—all except Johnson, who is a tackle, and Flaherty, unfortunately for them, happens to be well fortified in both departments.

Carr will ask all league clubs to waive on them and if none are claimed they will be released outright. Their fate will not be known for at least ten days, which is the waiver limit. Meanwhile, the quintet will be left at home tomorrow when the squad entrains for Chicago and the annual All-Star game.

The "Skins" drilled under the lights last night and will stage private work-outs today and tomorrow morning at Ballston. Flaherty will stage a dress rehearsal tomorrow morning, when the squad will run through its entire repertoire of new plays.

The team will b serenaded by the club band before entraining for Chicago. The management is arranging a parade from the hotel to the depot to assure the boys of a warm send-off.

A's, Browns Divide Pair

Philadelphia, Aug. 25.—The Athletics split a double-header with the St. Louis Browns today, losing the first game, 8 to 5, in 13 innings, and winning the second, 4 to 1.

Tom Heath's double off Edgar Smith with two mates on base, scored the winning runs in the first game, and a single by Buck Newsom drove Heath home with another. Harland Clift hit a home run to tie the score in the eighth. Newsom allowed 10 hits in gaining his sixteenth victory.

In the nightcap Buck Ross pitched a five-hitter. The Browns' attack included another homer by Clift. Frank Hayes hit a four-bagger for the A's with one on as the Macks nicked Oral Hildebrand for 10 blows.

Lowly Phillies Bump Leading Pirates Twice

Cellar-Dwelling Outfit Noses Out Bucs, 2-1, in Both Games; Second Goes 11 Innings; Mueller Wins Nightcap.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 25.—The swaying Pirate brig grounded on a Philadelphia sandbar today, the National League leading buccaneers dropping two games to the suddenly vicious cellar occupants by the identical scores of 2 to 1, the second contest going 11 innings.

As a result, New York climbed to within four and one-half games of first place by beating the Cards.

Impatient, no doubt, about the lack of activity at bat by their favorites, some of the 11,907 lady customers, a record free-entry crowd, went into action themselves late in the nightcap. During the scuffling one woman took off her shoes, swinging them until a neighbor snatched and hurled them into rightfield.

Morris Arnovich batted in the two Philly runs in the first game with a double and single, while Max Butcher was holding the Pirates to seven scattered hits. Singles by Paul Waner Vaughn and Suhr scored Pittsburgh's run.

Two old men, Wild Bill Hallahan and Red Lucas, engaged in a brilliant duel in the second game, with Gil Brack's bat deciding the issue. He opened the contest with a double and counted on George Scharein's double, then scratched a double in the eleventh and came home on Heinie Mueller's single.

Hallahan might have had a shutout, except for a mental lapse by Phil Weintraub in the seventh inning. Johnny Rizzo walked. When Suhr popped a but, the pitcher deliberately dropped it, then tossed to Weintraub.

The play came a little too fast for the first sacker, who automatically stepped on the bag, then tagged Rizzo, who had returned to the base. If he had tagged Johnny before touching the base, there

St. Louis, Aug. 25.—The New York Giants were handed a "charity" run ini the eleventh inning today to nose out the Cardinals, 8 to 7, and climb within 4½ games of the league-leading Pittsburgh Pirates in the National League race.

Pee-Wee Roy Henshaw, who entered the game in the tenth, walked the first batter, made an error on the second hitter's easy grounder, nad then saw the deciding run tally on two outfield flies.

Kelley on Mound Against Tigers Today

Harry Kelley will attempt to extend the Nats' winning streak to four straight today when he takes the mound against the Tigers in the second game of the current series.

Kelley, who had won three out of four starts before being routed in five innings at Boston last week, is expected to be opposed by Tommy Bridges.

Before the game, which will be played to a ladies' day crowd, Buddy Lewis will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by Arch McDonald in token of being selected as the Nats' Man of the Month for July. The gift is the donation of The Washington Post.

George Case emerged from his protracted hitting slump with a bang yesterday—a three-base bang against the centerfield will in the eighth inning. It was his first hit in 17 trips to the plate this week.

Bosox Tighten Second-Place Grip, Winning Pair, 1-0, 9-5

Jack Wilson Hurls and Bats Boston to Victory in First; Heving Is Winner.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Aug. 25.—The Red Sox today tightened their grip on second place by taking two games from the Chicago White Sox, a 1-to-0 pitching duel and a 9-to-5 struggle in which the teams piled up 30 hits.

Jack Wilson, Red Sox pitcher, won his own game in the opener when he slashed out a single in the seventh inning to drive in Bobby Doerr, who had doubled, with the only run of the contest. Jack Knott went the route for the Chisox.

Joe Heving won his third straight start for Boston in the second game although he was touched for 14 hits. He struck out six to help himself out of tight spots and his mates made 16 safeties, 13 of them off starter Johnny Whitehead, to put the game on ice.

Chicago was leading, 3 to 2, in the sixth inning when the Red Sox staged a five-run rally, highlighted by Doc Cramer's triple with three on base. Not one Red Socker struck out in either game.

Owens Isn't Worried With Helen's Challenge

Cleveland, Aug. 25 (AP).—Jesse Owens, opening up a new cleaning shop today amid flowers and a "fine" first day influx of suits, didn't appear much interested in the challenge of Helen Stephens, 100-meter Olympic champion, to a race "anytime."

Owens, holder of the same championship for men, said he had received no formal challenge from Miss Stephens but had heard she was "claiming she could beat me."

"It's kind of silly for a woman to think she can beat a man," said Owens. "Don't you think so?"

Man of the Month

By Arch McDonald.

(WJSV-Wheaties Baseball Commentator.)

Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties "Man of the Month."

Pete Appleton merited the lion's share of points awarded in the Man of the Month race yesterday on the basis of the Nats' performance against the Tigers. The points were distributed as follows:

To Appleton, five points, because he pitched a clever game in holding the Tigers to seven hits and two runs and allowing only one hit after the fifth inning.

To Zeke Bonura, two points, because he hit a home run that tied the score for the Nats in the second inning.

To Cecil Travis, one point, because his single and his triple figured in two Washington runs.

To Ossie Bluege, one point, because his double drove in an important run in the second inning.

To Sammy West, one point, because he contributed a single and a triple to the Nats' attack and scored two runs.

The Score:

Zeke Bonura	43	Ken Chase	10
Buddy Myer	23	Sammy West	10

Al Simmons	17	Pete Appleton	9

N.B.A. to Recognize Archibald-Dupre Winner as Champion

Battle Here MondayNow 'Title' Bout

Col. Miller Will Back Claims of Winner at Conclave.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Joey Archibold's ten-round battle with Tony Dupre Monday night at Griffith Stadium assumed a more important aspect yesterday when Heine Miller, secretary of the National Boxing Association ratings committee, announced that he will ask the organization to recognize the winner as the world featherweight champion.

Miller will present his plea at the association's annual convention in Toronto, Canada, which opens September 14. He said he will point out that Archibald has whipped every worthwhile contender, filed a challenge to box Armstrong and qualified in every respect for the title. Dupre, in the event that he wins, will have defeated the N. B. A.'s first-ranking challenger, thus will step up to that position and into the throne room in the event that Henry Armstrong refuses to defend the 126-pound crown.

The New York State Athletic Commission meanwhile has ordered Armstrong to defend his featherweight title before signing to defend either his lightweight or welterweight championships. It also ordered him to reply to Archibald's challenge, which was bolstered by the deposit of a check for $1,000, within 15 days. In the event that Armstrong declines to sign for the bout his throne will be vacated in New York.

Henry to Relinquish.

The National Boxing Association intends to take similar action at its convention, suiting to action the threat it utered some time ago. In California, however, Armstrong's manager, Eddie Meade, has stated that Henry will not defend the title unless a worthwhile purse is placed at stake. In usually well-informed circles, the word has been passed around that dusky Henry can't make the featherweight limit without reducing his staming to such a degree his health and boxing ability would be seriously impaired.

Archibald is training diligently for the fight, and expects to make the best showing of his career here when he goes out to meet the Manchester Italian. The Providence patent leather kid realizes the important of the bout, and will be gunning for a knockout from the first bell.

The championship is enough incantive for any fighter, but there is a personal angle to this bout which had Archibald heated up and anxious to fight long before the sudden series of recent events which have charged the entire compiexion of the bout. Dupre holds a technical knockout over Archibald—a decision handed down when Joey was tossed out of the ring for talking as toughly as he fights—and Joe

Dupre No Push-over.

But Dupre isn't exactly a push-over for Archibald, as he demonstrated in their first bout. He's a tough, hard-hitting boy and a counter-puncher in the bargain. He's got his eye on that title, too, and can be depended on for the greatest fight of his career in an effort to attain the goal of every fighter from preliminary boy to tap-ranking stars. Dupre figures he can seize the recognition that Archibald has been given through the careful manipulation of his manager. It's an opportunity that comes once in a life-time and he'll be ready.

Jack Johnson, former heavyweight champion, will referee two bouts involving colored boys. Slugger White, of Atlanta, meets Kid Howie in one—a 6-round semifinal, and Billy Banks boxes Billy Pitts four rounds in the other.

Bibber McCoy Winner In Stadium Mat Show

Crowd of 2,000 Dislike McCoy's Tactics, Threatens to Riot, but Olson Is Beaten Just the Same; Battle Royal, Women Wrestlers Also on Card.

Bibber McCoy survived a near riot and lots of excitement to win the feature of the weekly wrestling show last night at Griffith Stadium over Cliff Olson. The crowd of 2,00 disliked McCoy's antics and threatened to do something about it when Olson was pinned in 16 minutes with a body press.

Ruby Allen, the women's welter-weight champion, lost her title and won it back all within 21 minutes of the semifinal. Teddy Moran threw Rough Ruby in nine minutes of the scheduled bout, but Miss Allen squawled so long and loud that Miss Moran and the referee agreed to another fall.

The dethroned champ won her crown again in 12 minutes of the second bout.

Red Ryan and Ed Newman outlasted the other three contenders in the battle royal and Ryan threw Newman to win the event, all this happening within eight minutes.

Al Baksh used a flying scissors and body slam to pin Babe Bruckman in a preliminary, while Joe Dusek and Bobby Managoff treated the early birds to a 30-minute draw.

Pro Matches Carded Here TwoSundays

Ed Oliver Will Play Here With Jamison; Golf Notes.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Ed Oliver, Wilmington, Del., professional, winner of the pro-amateur tournament at Lancaster, Pa., last week will play at Indian Spring Sunday, September 4, with Al Jamison, host pro; Wiffy Cox, Congressional, and Lewis Worsham, Chevy Chase, thus assuring the local golf fans of pro exhibitions the next two Sundays.

The local octet will revive their informal sweepstakes Sunday at Kenwood with George Diffenbaugh, host mentor; Wiffy Cox, Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam; Leo Walper, Gene Larkin, Woodmont; Robert T. Barnett, Chevy Chase; Al Treder, Manor, and Mel Shorey, East Potomac, competing. Pairings will be announced later.

The match at Indian Spring the following week looms as a "natural" as both Oliver and Worsham are highly touted as future stars. Oliver, one of the longest hitters in the game today, will play with Jamison, against Worsham and Cox.

The Wilmington pro, a lifelong friend of Jamison, finished fourth in the Canadian Open, after leading the first round, and has won the South Jersey, Philadelphia and Atlantic City Opens already this season. He and Dave Douglas won the Lancaster event two years in succession. Worsham had 68 and Oliver 69 over the championship course in last Monday's tournament.

The local pro exhibition at Kenwood is the highlight of a Sunday's big card that includes three team matches and the Maryland State Golf Association Father and Son Tournament at the Hillendale Club, Baltimore.

Army and Navy's members will visit Washington Golf and Country Club, Belle Haven will trek to Quantico, while the Laurel Club of Richmond golfers will visit East Potomac for a return match. Jim Sweatte, captain of the local public links team, wants all members of the team to contact him prior to the encounter.

Next week's tournament card is topped by the National Amateur qualifying rounds at Congressional on Tuesday, with the entire field expected to practice Monday. Al Jamison will play host to the Middle Atlantic pros and their amateur partners in a proamateur event at Indian Spring Monday, while Harry Graham's father-and-son tourney starts the same day at Rock Creek. It runs through Tuesday. Eighteen teams have already entered.

At least 25 women golfers, headed by Marion Brown, District champion, and Mrs. Betty Meckley, semi-finalist the last three years, will play in the Mason-Dixon women's championship at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., starting Monday.

Bobby Brownell, playing some of the finest golf of his career of late, toured the Congressional Course in 70 strokes yesterday, 2 under par, to record the lowest score among the players in practice rounds for the amateur tryouts. Brownell will be heavily favored to win one of the eight places.

Billy Shea, Ralph Bogart, Forrest Thompson, Parker Nolan and the Capital trio, C Henry Cohen, George Molloy and Billy Houghton also practiced.

Lewis Worsham, jr., assistant professional at Chevy Chase, will seek a share of the $3,000 prize money in the Lake Placid Open Tournament, starting today in the New York summer resort. Vic Ghezzi, New Jersey pro, is defending champion.

New Orleans Wins.

Bill Ackerman . . . . . News of Fishermen

Although there are schools upon schools of fish, blues as well as trout and striped bass, from the Middles to Baltimore Light, which just about covers the entire upper bay area, they are showing more than the usual inconsistency in taking baited hooks and trolled lures. One boat will have really fine sport, while the next one might not even see any sign of fish.

ACKERMAN.

For that reason, if you are not going to the fishing fair at Rock Hall on the Chester River, your favorite fishing point is just as good as any other for this week-end.

For bass anglers there is some slight hope this week-end, if you don't mind hunting around a bit, and barring further rains on the headwaters. Early this week the Cacapon and the South Branch were reported clear, but also as "fished out" of keepers. The ten inch limit is hard to beat on some West Virginia streams this year.

At the same time, and although still muddy, the Shenandoah was slowly clearing. According to C. P. Miller, of Charleston, there was a chance that it might be fished late this week, but with the temperature as high as it is at present, we would prefer to give it several more days and try to find a clear spot in the Potomac.

With none of the big blue-fin tuna reported in Liverpool waters until Tuesday of this week, nevertheless this Nova Scotian city is the mecca of big-game fishermen all along the Atlantic Coast.

Paul Townsend, only local angler on the six-man American team, flew to New York early Wednesday to make connections that would give him a day to try out before the matches start on Saturday.

"Ham" Brown and George Huber, the only fishing scribes in this section to avail themselves of the grand invitation of the Canadian government, and Alton B. Sharp, head of Eastern Steamship and donor of the trophy, to attend the matches as their guests, also got under way late the same evening, while Jo and Roy Haines, local anglers, who have been following this fishing since 1935, are already on the grounds.

To date 54 tuna, averaging 448 pounds, have been taken in the tiderips of Bald Tusket, Wedgeport, where the matches were held last year, while Liverpool boasts, fishing on the grounds off Lunenburg have caught fewer fish, but averaging higher in weight.

Earl Roman, probably the most widely read fishing editor anywhere, for his Anglers Notes are subscribed to from every corner of the earth, but better known to local anglers who fish Florida in the winter, because they unfailingly call on him in Miami for the "hot spots," arrives tomorrow for a short holiday with his "folks."

This section is home to him, for it was in our familiar bay waters he started his piscatorial activities, that since, have taken him to almost every State in the Union, and which this winter will very likely take him to Puerto Rico to pioneer sport-fishing there.

And talking of big-game fishing, our wonder continues to grow and grow—that local anglers, who travel hundreds of miles each winter, solely for the Florida Gulf Stream fishing, are not availing themselves of the marlin fishing in Maryland's offshore waters. Fishing that in no way suffers in comparison with the finest they have ever enjoyed there—except probably as to size. But then, even in that semi-tropical Eden, big ones are the exception and not the rule.

Is it because of the first flurry, back in the second week of July, when boats were almost unobtainable, that anglers are wary of the short trip to Ocean City? For if that is the reason—hop in the jalopy and get going, that isn't the situation at present.

Now, there isn't a day but what finds fully half of the fleet at the dock, while it is seldom that every boat out fails to get one or more white marlin, for they are more numerous than at any time this year. Not only that, but several of the large blue marlin have been missed because of inadequate tackle, one sailfish taken and another on for three jumps, while the big mako sharks are a likely customer at any time. In between, albacore, tuna and dolphin make up a variety not to be found this side of Southern seas.

The Virginia press is all agog because several of the Old Dominion boats have taken, during the past week, several marlin in shore of Winter Quarter Light Vessel, but it is nothing more than the same schools traveling the same lush feeding grounds with the prevailing winds.

Feeding grounds, there is little doubt, extend the full length of the Virginia coast, which, in the next few years, will probably prove to be as productive as those off the Maryland shore.

In the meantime, get in on this last fling of the season. The fishing will last as long as easterly winds continue. We might be a poor salesman in selling this new sport, but it is safe to say, returning anglers are in no way bashful in its praise when they call us up.

J. W. Lee and Jack Kerkam caught a tuna each this week, R. D. Davis a 60-pound marlin, H. C. Rouse, sr. a 65-pound marlin, Col. W. B. Lemly and Capt. H. W. Lemly each a dolphin, 20 and 21 pounds, and one marlin, while H. W. Davis in the same party had a marlin. B. F. Smith, Takoma Park, two marlin. John Dickinson and Howard Burkhardt each a marlin—their party had altogether 14 fish on and sighted at least 40.

Late Wednesday evening, Capt. B. L. Raymond had another large sailfish playing all around the squid teaser bait within ten feet of his boat. Continuance of the prevailing easterly winds should see several more of these fish taken.

Two Holes-in-One On Local Courses

Fulton Brylawski, Woodmont golfer, and Shuford Tucker, visitor from Fayettsville, N. C., playing at Indian Spring, joined the hole-in-one club yesterday with perfect shots at the respective courses.

Tucker, playing with Dick Melvin, watched his host tour the course in 4 under par of 67, with an out nine of par 35 and a second trip of 4 under regulation 32.

Tucker stepped up to the sixth hole and hit a No. 7 iron that dropped short of the cup and trickled in for the ace.

Brylawski was playing with Stanley Fisher, Al Steinem and Pro Gene Larkin at Woodmont when he aced the 130-yard eighth hole with a No. 6 iron shot. Brylawski had started the round with a birdie but hit a slump and despite a half stroke a hole handicap from Larkin was losing at a fast clip until he hit the eighth, where he did something about it. He parred the ninth, making a par, birdie and eagle for the round, sandwiched between six bogeys.

Smokers' Test showed Vintage tobacco was easier on your breath

WHITE OWLS are definitely easier on your breath—scientific tests proved it. Every White Owl always has a filler of Vintage quality and—like a Vintage wine—nature made it exceptionally mild, mellow.

We maintain a vast and unique crop-inspection system . . . classify all filler tobaccos into seven grades, using only tobacco of the top three for Vintage White Owls.

All this to give you a Vintage smoke. You'll like its taste—and ladies will admire your taste for choosing it. Try a White Owl today.

THE METALLIC NOSE KNOWS

Scientists use a sensitive osmoscope to measure odor . . . to record its intensity and lasting power. Ten popular brands of 5¢ cigars were tested by this machine. White Owl was easier on the breath than all the others. After 30 minutes, all trace of tobacco odor disappeared from the breath of White Owl smokers.

See where Virgil Trucks, 19-year-old Anadalusia right-hander, has smashed all modern strikeout records . . . That's really truckin' on down, you might say . . . Among the promising candidates for the Navy football squad is Russell Crenshaw, jr., son of Capt. Crenshaw, stationed here in the Navy Department . . . Young Crenshaw is spending his summer leave with his father . . . John Dickey, a Maryland University basketball star around the time Bozie Berger was winning national acclaim, is director of the Bancroft Playground here . . . What's this about mutiny in the ranks of the Giants? . . . Reports say the boys are split into pro-Terry and anti-Terry factions . . .

Have you seen the Regatta Log, a tabloid-size paper, which will be released weekly until after the President's Cup Regatta scheduled here next month? . . . A regatta official, incidentally, has estimated the overall cost of staging that elaborate event will be about $100,000. That includes, of course, the expenses of visiting competitors . . . The Navy football schedule is very favorable to Baltimore and local fans, what with the Middies meeting Princeton and Notre Dame in the Monumental City . . . How about that relief stretch the 38-year-old Charley Root turned in against the Giants the other afternoon? Four hits, no runs in 8 1-3 innings and just when they were crooning his swan song . . .

Forty-three candidates will tumble out when George Munger, starting his first season as football coach at University of Pennsylvania, sounds the call September 5 . . . The Quakers will train in Hershey, Pa., until the 17th . . . And just one year ago today . . . Bob Feller fanned 16 Bosox to equal the American League strikeout record as Cleveland beat Boston, 8-1. What ever happened to the feller? . . . Washington came up with a run in the ninth to turn back the Browns, 7-6 . . . Joe Louis ruled a 6-1 favorite over Tommy Farr, with little Welshman money in view, as the heavyweights prepared for their 15-round title fight in New York . . . William Shea, Congressional youngster, was eliminated by Fred Haas in the second round of the National Amateur at Portland.

Dark Revue Takes Place; Shot Up Next

Victor Scores by Length Over Favorite; 4,500 Fans Attend.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Marlboro, Md., Aug. 26.—American Belle, a veteran mare which had failed to win in 20 starts this year, and Jockey Tommy Fowler, who went the best part of a year without riding a winner, teamed together to bring joy to a few fortunate bettors as they won the Holly Beach Farm Purse, today's feature event here in the tobacco country.

With Fowler driving, American Belle finished a length in advance of Dark Revue, the favorite from the barn of Mrs. J. B. Bond. Shot Up, owned by J. E. Crider was third.

There were more groans than cheers in the crowd of 4,500 as a $40.40 mutuel tag was hung out on the six-year-old daughter of Byrd and Belle of America. The field of seven competed in the mile-and-a-sixteenth course with the winner being timed in 1:56 1-5.

The start decided the issue between American Belle and Dark Revue. The ultimate winner was first away in contrast to a poor beginning for the favorite. Fowler steadied American Belle along while Ever Grand, a sprinter, was setting the pace and failed to be lured into letting her out when Dark Revue was rushed into the thick of the battle.

When asked, American Belle forged to the front and opened a gap. Jockey Freddie Faust put Dark Revue to punishment in the closing sixteenth and the filly closed some ground, but Fowler and the old mare were not to be denied.

Broken Rhythm, a filly which has broken many a bettor, finally entered the winner's circle in the first race, paying an $11.20 mutuel. She finished a length in front of Hi Blaze, with Six o'Clock third. Leah Fern, the favorite, was a dull performer.

Jockey Leon Garrett took L'Envoi to the front early in the second and stayed there while Gimpey, the choice, was having pecks of trouble. L'Envoi paid a scattered backing an $18.80 mutuel and, couped with the first winner, produced at $182.20 daily double payoff.

Apprentice Jockey Al Cole, making his first appearance on any track, drove Chiliad, owned by A. Horwitz, of Bowie, Md., to victory in the third event. The veteran son of Chilhowee paid $13.60. Good Dame was second and Trostar was third.

In the first real photo finish of the meeting, Lula Khayyam earned a nose verdict over Schley Goree. Inactive was third in the limit field of eight. Lula hayyam, well handled by Apprentice Witmer, paid $8.30.

JOLLY FEAST, far back in early stages after breaking poorly, closed much ground. BETWICK went evenly. NOON SUN stopped after pressing early pace. COLIN ROI was squeezed back directly after break.

Daily Double, Broken Rhythm and L'Envoi, Paid $182.20.

CHILIAD, rushed to contention after break, ran CHESSIE into submission to take command and had to be kept to drive to hold GOOD DAME safe. GOOD DAME closed full of run. TROSTAR, pulled up sharply when in close quarters leaving stalls, gained steadily thereafter to close with rush. CHATTERDOO lacked early speed and came wide for racing room to close a gap. CHESSIE was used up setting and forcing pace. ADDIS ABABA lost rider when bumped at first turn.

FOURTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:52. Off 3:53. Winner, H. Massey's ch. f. LULA KHAYYAM took lead from CAT'S CRADLE when asked, was hard ridden to stave off repeated challenges of SCHLEY GOREE and barely lasted. SCHLEY GOREE went up on outside with bold rush to run head and head with winner and just missed while put to punishment. INACTIVE was away sluggishly and could not better position.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; allowances. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:28. Off 4:29. Winner, Mrs. C. B. AMERICAN BELLE, forwardly placed from start, took command when EVER GRAND stopped, drew out and was kept to hand ride to end. DARK REVUE had something taken out of her in early stages while improving position and closed with good courage. SHOT UP saved ground while moving up and closed well. EVER GRAND stopped after setting early pace.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:01. Off 5:05. Winner, Mrs. C. M. TalkedAbout Pays $8.40 At 'Gansett

Noses Out Clingendaal in Feature; Rough Time Is Third.

By the Associated Press.

Pawtucket, R. I., Aug. 25.—One of the most thrilling races of the current meeting today saw Calumet Farm's Talked About eke out a nose decision over C. A. Compton's Clingendaal in the Concord Purse, Narragansett Park feature, to pay $8.40 to win.

Clingendaal paid $3.70 to place and finished a neck in front of J. Y. Christmas' Rough Time, which paid $3.80 to show.

Rough Time finished half a length in front of Norman Church's Lavengro as the first four horses in the six-horse field hit the finish wire within a length of each other.

Timed in 1:11 for the 6 furlongs, Talked About was accounting for his sixth victory in 17 starts this year.

By saving ground on the rail all the way, Jockey Irving Anderson conserved Talked About's strength during the hectic race so that he had enough left at the end to overpower the tiring Clingendaal.

The winner broke in front, but Rough Time hustled into the lead before the field had gone very far. Rough Time led until there was but a sixteenth of a mile left, and it was at this point that Talked About, under a driving finish by Anderson, shoved his nose in front and kept it there until the photograph was taken.

Lavengro made one brief bid at the far turn, but while he was close up at the finish he was not in the money. Clingendaal, after running fourth most of the way, closed gamely at the end to take down second money. Talked About earned $1,050 by his victory, bringing his earnings for the year to $6,605.

Selections at Marlboro.

Dear Al:

I met a friend of Jockey Charlie Rosengarten, who rode Aneroid in the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap last winter. He says that "Rosie" now weighs 180 pounds. Here's one for the books as far as jockeys are concerned. Apprentice Jockey George Witmer actually is trying to put on weight. He only weighs 94 pounds and is losing mounts because trainers don't believe he is strong at that weight. He is eating ice cream and pie while many of the other riders here are hitting the road and half starving themselves in an effort to keep the poundage down. I heard a fair story on the behind-the-scenes of Virginia breeding yesterday. It seems that one horseman owed another a sum of about $1,500 and he asked for it. The breeder said, "I haven't the cash right here. How about taking a half interest in that colt. I'm sending him to the Saratoga sales next week." The horseman called it a deal. The following week, the colt was purchased by Mrs. Dodge Sloane for $22,000. Clocker Mike made a tour of the stables with his new invention, "the talk-a-horse" which he claims allows him to converse with horses. Mike said the following horses told him they would win today: Boulderdam, Miss Troy, Wahcoo and Sea Finn. It looks like Mike is sticking out his chin. Here are the winners: BILL.

First race—Look Forward has been trying to get out of the maiden ranks for some time. Comes to the races after a rest and the trials say this one is ready. Windsor Boy has run some good races and should be close. Anneke might take it all if taken off the reserve list.

Second race—Vendor's Lein takes four pounds off and has a sizzling last to recommend him in this field. Sure Miss Needs only the right ride. Sure Miss evidently likes this track, as that recent win indicates. Looms as the one to beat. Adhelmar is good and should take part of the money.

Third race—Green Water has been close in numerous races this year without earning the top share of a purse. That last was a sharp effort and with the track soft this one may take it all. Postponement, first on the also-eligible list, will be a keen factor if in action. Gee Sharp should like the route and is dangerous.

Fourth race—Blond Reel is at best on slow tracks. Last indicates good form and I see no reason for mistakes. Proteus is a veteran with plenty of speed and may be close despite the heavy assignment. Miss Troy is reported fit.

Fifth race—Pencader looks like a solid betting proposition in this company. Favors the route and gets the best-bet call. Secret Vote will improve on this oval. Idyllic for the show end.

Sixth race—Boro Poker seems nicely suited here. The big horse is primed, I understand. Cancel was prepared for a race of this sort and is due respect. Sally Quick to take care of the others.

Seventh race—Sea Finn appears ready for the question here. Probably will be the favorite and should score. Famous Clayton should go well. Early Call won impressively at Bell Air.

Eighth race (Substitute)—If this race is used, I'll take Lady Cirek, Mad Dash and Ardor.

Corning Ace Easy Winner At Saratoga

Thanksgiving Defeats Great Union and Jolly Tar.

By the Associated Press.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 25.—Mrs. Parker Corning's Thanksgiving, a colt that came into his own at the current meeting, followed up his recent Traverse success with another triumph here today in the thirty-sixth Huron Handicap of one and three-sixteenth miles. The bay son of Bud Lerner-Inchcape Belle carried scale weight of 126 pounds and triumphed by a length and a half in 1:58 2-5.

Mrs. E. Graham Lewis' Great Union, surprise winner of the Merchants' and Citizens' Handicap, lasted to save the place by a head from W. M. Jeffords' Jolly Tar. Thanksgiving, an even money choice in the field of six 3-year-olds, added $3,375 to his earnings and further substantiated his position among the leaders of his division.

Meddie Arcaro, riding his second straight winner, got Thanksgiving away in front, but allowed Sun Alexandria and Great Union to steal several lengths clear of him in the run around the first turn. Great Union shook off Sun Alexandria and stole two lengths' advantage around the final bend. At this point, Thanksgiving and the slow-starting Jolly Tar, which has been placed on the outside of the stalls, made their moves. Jolly Tar, second in the Travers, moved up with a rush on the rail.

Thanksgiving put Great Union away inside the last furlongs and drew out. Great Union, now a tired horse, gamely continued, but Jolly Tar drove up on the inside, finding a narrow opening there. The Man o' War colt just failed to get up for the place. Sun Alexandria was a distant fourth.

Gentle Savage and Nedayr, a stablemate of Sun Alexandria, were scratched. It is understood that the latter is being saved fo the Thornton Memorial at Narragansett Saturday.

Patty Berg Victor in Women's Tourney

Minnesota Star Nears Golf Crown

Scores Seven Birdies in Rout of Miss Dudley at Chicago.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 25.—Patty Berg, red-headed golfing marvel from Minneapolis, moved closer today to her first women's Western championship.

Miss Berg, just 20 and chubby, gave the No. 4 course at Olympia Fields Country Club a beating in swamping Eleanor Dudley, of Chicago, the Illinois State champion, in the quarter-finals, 7 to 6, with the most sensational shooting of the tournament.

Bringing down seven birdies along the route, the freckle-faced Minneapolis girl, seeking her ninth victory in 12 engagements this year, set a subpar pace to gain a berth in tomorrow's semifinals.

She was out in 37, two under par, and negotiated the 12 holes, where she ended the match, in four strokes under it. Par the rest of the way would have given her a 75, a stroke under the course record held jointly by herself and the eliminated tournament medalist, Barbara Ransom, of Stockton, Calif.

Plays Ann Johnson.

In the semifinals tomorrow Miss Berg plays Shirley Ann Johnson, of Chicago. Mrs. Burt Weil, of Cincinnati, engages bespectacled Edith Estabrooks, of Dubuque, Iowa, at 18 holes, starting at 1 p. m.

Mrs. Dan Chandler, of Dallas, Tex., who defeated Miss Ransom in the first round, was herself eliminated by Miss Estabrooks, former Western junior champion, 5 and 4.

Going out in 40, one over par, Miss Estabrooks fashioned a 2-hole lead at the turn. She was two under par coming home with birdies on the tenth and twelfth and ended the match on the fourteenth with a par 5 to Mrs. Chandler's 6.

Mrs. Weil Advances.

Mrs. Weil, conqueror of Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., the defending champion, advanced by defeating Ellamae Williams, of Chicago, 2 up. Mrs. Weil carded 39, even par, going to 40 for Miss Williams to go three up at the turn. The Chicago girl, registering birdies on the twelfth and fourteenth and taking the seventeenth in par, lost when Mrs. Weil won the final hole with a birdie against a par 5.

Miss Johnson caused an upset by defeating Mrs. Opal S. Hill, of Kansas City, a three-time winner of the championship, 2 and 1.

Mrs. Hill won only the sixteenth hole and lost the others on the greens.

Unmindful of the huge gallery trailing her, Miss Berg was not long in settling into her marvelous stride. She won the first hole with a bogey 6 to Mrs. Dudley's 7, captured the next two with birdie 4's halved the fourth in par, won the fifth with a birdie 3 against Miss Dudley's 5 and went two strokes over par to lose the sixth, it was the only hole she lost. Then she swept the next three with two birdies and a par for a 6 up margin at the turn.

The Chicagoan staved off defeat by matching Patty's birdie on the tenth and par 4 on the eleventh. She failed to sink a five-footer on the twelfth, and Patty ended it by dropping her putt from 6 feet and her seventh birdie.

Their cards:

Par out	555	443	535—39
Miss Berg out	644	435	434—37
Miss Dudley out	755	453	456—44
Par in	545
Miss Berg in	444
Miss Dudley in	445

Kreuzburg, Washington Player, Deadlocked With Chick Bash in Buckwood Play at Shawnee

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Ehawnee-On-Delaware, Pa., Aug. 25.—Chick Bash, of Trenton, N. J., and Richard T. Kreuzburg, Indian Spring, Washington, D. C., tied for the medal in the twenty-fifth annual Buckwood Trophy Tournament of the Shawnee Country Club here today with 75s.

Neither of the leaders can lay claim to going farther in a major tournament than the semifinals, but both shot excellent golf today. Bash was much more steadier and no worse than a 5 showed on his card, his 3 over par was the result of a messing up the twelfth.

Kreuzburg, on the other hand, was even with par going to the sixteenth and went 3 over playing the lats two holes. As far as the twelfth hole he was 2 under par for a while threatened for the medal.

A. M. Collum, also broke 80 with a 79 and had it not been for a ball out of bounds at both the third and ninth would of given the leaders a fight for the medal.

Frank Allan, of Pittston, had trouble with his irons and scored a 43-37—80. Allan is a former winner of the historic trophy and will be a dangerous man during the match rounds, which start tomorrow. Eighty-seven or better was needed to qualify, and the first 16 is made up of players from widely scattered areas.

Montreal Maroons Suspend for Year

New York, Aug. 25 (AP).—The Montreal Maroons of the National Hockey League, in dire financial straits during the past two seasons, today were granted permission to suspend operations for one year by the league's board of governors.

As a result of this action the N. H. L. will operate with seven teams during the 1938-39 season—the New York Rangers and New York Americans, Toronto Maple Leafs, Montreal Canadiens, Boston Bruins, Detroit Red Wings and Chicago Blcakhawks.

Before approving the suspension, the governors had rejected the club's application to transfer its franchise to St. Louis under option. This arrangement would have given the Reconstruction Investment Co. of St. Louis the right to buy the team within three years. But since the St. Louis interests put up no cash and gave no guarantee of how long they would be willing to operate the club, President Frank Calder of the N. H. L. said the governors felt this would not be a satisfactory solution.

Louis Heads Own Team

Champion Brings Outfit to Meet Locals.

Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis leads his Brown Bombers softball team into action tonight at Griffith Stadium, opposing Dr. Pepper in an exhibition game scheduled for 8:15 o'clock.

Louis, who plays first base for the Bombers, was not exactly a star in last year's game between the teams, striking out twice, but claims to have improved since that fateful night. He'll be on exhibition, however, along with the rest of the Bombers.

Abe Rosenfield, southpaw ace, will hurl for the Peppers. Generally recognized as the city's outstanding softball twirler, Rosenfield suffered his first setback of the campaign yesterday, losing an eight-inning decision to Patent Office, 1-0, in a city series game.

The Dr. Pepper team represented Washington in the national tournament at Chicago last year and has lost only 3 games in more than 50 played this season. The Bombers' record shows 62 victories against 6 defeats on their barnstorming tour.

McErlean, a butcher's boy, allowed five hits, two of which, in the tenth inning, cost him the decision. The Brooklyn Dodgers, of the National League, have an interest in him.

Australian Net Doubles Team Victor

Quist, Bromwich Advance to Finals of National Event.

By the Associated Press.

Brookline, Mass., Aug. 25.—Like the Davis Cup challenge round, the National doubles tennis championship final was assured of an Australian-American tinge today when two pair of players from "down under" gained semi-final brackets in the same half of the draw at the Longwood Cricket Club.

Completing the split-up quarter-final round matches in the men's division, Adrian Quist and Jack Bromwich, the Australian Davis Cup stars, defeated Gardner Mulloy, of Miami, and George Toley, of Los Angeles, 6—1, 9—7, 6—2, while their international team's spares, Harry Hopman and Leonard Schwartz, eliminated Yvon Petra and Bernard Destremau, of France, 6—0, 9—7, 8—6 in a thrilling battle.

The Australians will clash in one of tomorrow's semi-finals and two sets of former winners, Donald Budge and Gene Mako, the United States Cup stars, and Wilmer Allison and Johnny Van Ryn, the Austin, Tex., veterans, will vie in the other. The Americans qualified yesterday.

Marble-Fabyan Win.

Before the men took to the courts, Alice Marble and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, title defenders in their division, became finalists by turning back Kay Stammers and Margot Lumb, of England, 6—2, 6—2, with sparkling and almost machine-like tennis. As a result, Miss Marble and the young Cambridge matron will mark time until two foreign pairs, Nancye Wynne and Thelma Coyne, of Australia, settle their semifinal differences with Mme. Rene Mathieu, of France, and Jadwiga Jedrzejowska, of Poland.

Quist and Bromwich, rated as likely finalists against Budge and Mako, had an easy time against the American youngsters in all except the second set, which was decided only after the Australians gained the vital break in the fifteenth game.

Aussies "Efficient."

Quist and Bromwich performed in efficient fashion, piling up 36 earned points against 24 for the Americans and holding down their errors to 51 against 74.

But the day's thrills remained to be supplied by their compatriots. Petra and Destremau, after dropping the first six games to their smooth-playing rivals, reversed themselves in amazing fashion and put on such a magnificent spurt that the Australian secondaries had to battle through 16 close games before they went two sets up by breaking through Destremau.

The third set pace was faster and even more exciting, but the gallant Frenchmen were forced to surrender when four steaming placements were poured on Destremau as he served the fourteenth and final game.

Miss Wynne and Quist were the only team to gain the semifinals in the mixed doubles division, recording a 9—7, 6—2 victory over Mrs. Fabyan and Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, who were seeded second.

Former Hoya Trainer Signs With Brooklyn

New York, Aug. 24 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers of the National Professional Football League announced the signing of three more players, bringing their roster to 40. Those signed were Jeff Barrett, former Louisiana State end, who has been with the club for two seasons; Roy Ilowit, former City College tackle, and Marty Olsen, 235-pound Gustavus Adolphus guard.

Coach George (Potsy) Clark also announced the appointment of Ray Sweeney, formerly associated with Georgetown, Cornell and Ithaca College, as team trainer.

She was a graduate of Ohio State University and the University of Chicago. She had been president of the Niki Club in Chicago and a member of the Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority.

Funeral services will be held at 3 p. m. today at Hysong's parlor, 1300 N street northwest. Burial will be in Worthington Sunday. Miss Wright is survived by her brother and a niece, Mrs. Margaret Schlotterback, of Dayton, Ohio, and a nephew, George B. Goodrich, of Longdale, Okla.

Ohio Rfler Wins $5,000 Handicap

By the Associated Press.

Vandalia, Ohio, Aug. 25.—Lowell R. Slagle, husky 31-year-old garage mechanic, maintained tradition today by "popping up from nowhere" to win the $5,000 preliminary handicap, dress rehearsal for the Grand American handicap trapshoot which comes up Friday to close the thirty-ninth annual clay-target bombardment.

The South Charleston, Ohio, marksman broke 98 of 100 clays from 19 yards to tie three other shooters and then defeated them in a shoot-off.

Dr. M. E. Hagerty, of St. Louis, Mo., finished second; Paul Spargur, of Springfield, Ohio, third, and C. C. Bunn, of Gillespie, Ill., fourth.

Bunn broke 21 of 25 in the shoot-off, and Spargur 23. Hagerty and Slagle went straight and in the second 25 each missed noe. In the last 25 Slage broke 24, while Hagerty missed four.

Reds Beaten Twice, 6-4, 3-2

Boston Bees Upset Boys in Drive for Second.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Aug. 25.—The Concinnati Reds sailed higher than a kite in the closing innings of two games with the Boston Bees today, losing the first, 6 to 4, in 12 innings, and the second, 3 to 2, when the Bees got to Bucky Walters for all their runs after two were out in the ninth.

The performance cost them a chance to edge into second race, and left them tied for third with Chicago, who beat Brooklyn twice.

Walters held the Bees scoreless with two hits until the third man came up in the ninth. Then he walked two, gave a single, another walk, and another single for three runs.

After DiMaggio tied the first game with a homer in the sixth, the two teams fought on to the twelfth, when the Bees produced three hits and two runs.

Airflame Doped, Vanderbilt Fears

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 25 (AP).—The New York State Racing Commission today suspended Raymond Smith, Negro groom of the horse, Airflame, until further notice, as it met to investigate the "doping" of Airflame and possibly other horses in races at Saratoga.

Airflame ran last in the fifth race August 17 and immediately after the race his owner, Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, and Trainer J. H. Stotler reported to Commission Steward Marshall Cassidy that the horse apparently had been drugged. Saliva samples were taken and analysis at the commission laboratory disclosed the presence of a large dose of a narcotic.

German Girl Claims She Swam Channel

Dover, England, Aug. 25 (AP).—A German girl swimmer, Bruna Wendel, landed at Shakespeare Cliff, 2½ miles from Dover, today, and announced she had swum the English Channel in 15 hours 3 minutes.

Eyewitnesses on the beach said the girl came ashore at 11:03 a. m. and dispatches from Cap Gris Nez, on the French side, said she entered the water there last night.

West Coast Stars Lead In Publinks

By the United Press.

Cleveland, Aug. 25.—Four unhailed "pay-as-you-play" linksmen—three from the West Coast and one local hope—swept into the semifinals of the National Public Links Golf Championship tonight.

The survivors, as the field narrowed from 16 to 4, were Louis Cyr, 31, Portland, Oreg., railroad car inspector; Eddie Beck, Portland wholesale hardware salesman; Bart Taro, 16-year-old Seattle, Wash., high school student, and Al Leach, 26, WPA timekeeper.

In their quarter-final round battles today, Cyr thumped a fellow Portlander, Tad Boyer, 3 and 2; Beck whipped Ralph Evans, of Santa Monica, Calif., 3 and 2; Taro blasted Dennis Lavender, Texas State champion from Dallas, 3 and 2, and Leach ousted Tommy Bolt, lanky Louisiana titlist from Shreveport, 2 and 1.

In tomorrow's 36-hole play for the title positions in the seventeenth annual struggle for supremacy of America's "working-class" golfers Cyr meets Beck and Taro tangles with Leach. The 36-hole final will be played Saturday.

Cyr, who had to play off against 17 others to qualify, won over Boyer in a loosely played match.

Beck outclassed Evans, 3 and 1, cracking out a subpar 34 on the first nine. He had three fives, but sank a mashie niblick for eagle 2 on the second hole.

Taro established himself as the "hottest" of the last four in his triumph over Lavender. The youthful former caddy compiled a margin of six up on the first nine and coasted to the end.

Leach used his long experience in match-play competition in good stead against his temperamental rival.

Leach used his long experience in match-play competition in good stead against his temperamental rival. He snatched an early lead only to see Bolt even the count four times. Leach finally punched out a birdie on the sixteenth and a par on the seventeenth to clinch the match.

Heurichs Win In Title Test

With Archie Scrivener, southpaw handy man cast in the leading role, Heurichs scored a 4-3 victory over Procurement in the first game of the city-wide championship series.

The victors made only four hits off Preston, and two of them were credited to Scrivener, who also scored as many runs. The lean outfielder also starred on the bases, going from first to third on a sacrifice, and making the same trip a second time on an infield out.

Housing Act Loans Exceed $75,000,000

Property Improvement Campaigns Progress Throughout U. S.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Property improvement campaigns under amendments to the national housing act, as represented locally by the successful effort of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, are meeting with similar satisfactory results in other parts of the country. Federal Housing Administration officials view the national 1938 record of property improvement loan insurance involving more than 150,000 loans totaling more than $75,000,000, as another important advance in the accomplishment of an objective—improvement in housing standards and conditions. All 48 States have shared in the benefits available to property owners under the program, FHA figures show.

3 U. S. Agencies Report Upturn

By the Associated Press.

Three Federal agencies offered today statistical evidence of substantial business improvement in recent weeks.

The Federal Reserve Board calculated that the upswing in steel, textiles, petroleum, shoe and other industries had won back in the last seven weeks all the ground lost in the previous seven months.

At the Treasury, a 25 per cent spurt in customs collections indicated to officials that conditions had improved to the point where purchases of foreign raw materials and other merchandise were affected. Since many basic raw materials imported by American industry are duty-free, officials regarded the customs gains as particularly significant.

The Commerce Department reported the first favorable turn in its index of National income in nearly a year. July income declined less than the usual seasonal amount, and the Nation's income from wages, dividends and other sources was estimated at $35,300,000,000 for the first seven months of the year.

Strength of High-Grade Railroad Shares Supports General Rally.

New York, Aug. 24.—Stocks reversed their course of Wednesday when irregularly lower prices of the early hours of trading today gave way to a good upward movement in the final hour. Losses in most of the leaders were wiped out and the composite average of the list showed a net advance of 0.27 point. In keeping with the custom of the last few weeks, trading dwindled on the reaction, the volume for the day being 826,570 shares.

Rail stocks, particularly those of the better grade, were instrumental in prompting the rally, thus stealing the spotlight from the motor and accessory shares, which featured the earlier part of the week. These two last named groups joined in the late strength and there was also good support for the steel and manufacturing divisions, while utilities were firm. Technicians within the ranks of the bullish forces were pleased to see the snap in the rail issues for such stocks have been laboring under the depressing influence of efforts of managements to persuade holders of senior obligations to accept reductions in interest payments in order to permit the systems to avoid section 77. Faced with high fixed charges and taxes, low operating revenues and a battle to bring down wages, the path of railroad stocks has been a stony one while the motor market has been booming along.

Better Railroad News.

There was no sensational news before the close to help the rails today but the improved outlook for current carloadings, the fact that the carriers are coming into their best traffic months and better earning statements contributed to the better tone of these shares. After the close there was rail news of a more vital character. The Lehigh Valley announced that definite approval of its plan to avert bankruptcy or receivership had been given by Government agencies and a substantial number of institutional holders of its securities.

Lehigh Valley stock and bonds, inactive in today's dealings, edged forward slight fractions. Most active in the rail section was New York Central, followed by Southern Pacific, up ⅝. Gains of other leading carrier stocks included Atchison, 1⅜; Coast Line, 1⅛, and Union Pacific, ⅞. Delaware & Hudson, which revealed the sale of another block of its holdings in New York Central, bringing its holdings now to an estimated 300,000 shares, was up half a point in quiet dealings.

Chrysler at New High.

Motors were not neglected while the rails put on their fireworks today. Chrysler went to a new high, and General Motors equaled the high established Wednesday, their gains for the session being 1⅜ and ⅜ respectively. Greater strength was shown by the motor accessory shares, prominent being Briggs, up 1¾, and Lof Glass, up 1½. Packard was active and closed unchanged. Tire issues were led by United States Rubber, up a fraction, while fractional gains also were shown by the Goodyear and Goodrich issues.

Issues in other groups which managed to come back and close with gains of a point or more included American Tobacco B, Du Pont, Johns Manville and Westinghouse. Phillip Morris jumped 3½ and its preferred 2 points.

New Bonds at Premium.

A sharp rally in wheat carried futures in this commodtiy 2 cents above the five-year lows. Buying was credited to exporters and traders who were short. The close was up ⅛ to 1 cent a bushel. Near positions in cotton were firm as the trade maintained its waiting position. The close was up 4 points to one point lower.

Price changes in the listed bond market were small today, but investment bankers paid little attention in any event, for the several new issues placed on the market kept things humming. Premiums of 1 to 2 points over offering levels quickly were established for the $33,000,000 Commonwealth Edison and $20,000,000 Lone Star flotations, which is a sufficient index of the demand for genuinely high-grade securities. The listed market produced more small gains than losses, but the general levels were undisturbed both in high-grade and speculative bonds. Turnover was only $5,270,000.

Speculative railroad bonds continued to attract some interest, but the modest buying of some issues was offset by liquidation of others. The better rated bonds in the intermediate price group showed best results, but some default carrier bonds also improved. Local traction issues rallied smartly, after their previous decline. Communications bonds reflected some busy buying, and commodity issues likewise firmed. Convertibles were moderately active and higher.

United States Treasury securities moved higher by smallest fractions in an idle session. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations also were idle. Best grade utility, railroad and industrial bonds held generally to previous levels, although a small fractional gain placed United States Steel debentures at a fresh high since issuance.

Scandinavian and Australian bonds were higher in the foreign group, while Canadians held to previous figures. Argentines were quiet and unchanged. Japanese bonds were irregular, with the main trend downward, while Italians improved. In the European and Latin-American default groups dullness prevailed.

Wheat Prices Recover From Five-Year Lows

Buying Credited to Exporters and Covering Trades of Short Interests.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 25.—Wheat prices staged a sharp 2-cent rally from near five-year low levels in the final hour of trading today and wound up with net gains ranging from fractions to a cent for the day.

Buying credited to exporters and traders who previously had sold short and were evening up positions on the 3-cent break yesterday and early today caused the strong recovery. Commission house orders and buying reported to have originated in the East caught the pit fairly well liquidated after noon when prices had declined more than a cent from yesterday's close.

Independent strength in corn, with revived export business spurred by sales estimated as high as 1,500,000 bushels helped sentiment in the wheat pit. Corn export business the past two days was believed around 2,000,000 bushels, mostly to the United Kingdom.

Wheat closed ⅛ to 1 cent higher, compared with yesterday's finish, September, 62⅝@62¾; December, 64½@64¾; corn, ¾ to 1¼ higher, September, 51⅞@52; December, 49¾@49⅞; oats, unchanged to ¼ up; rye, ¾ to 1⅜ higher; provisions, 2 to 5 lower.

U. S. Displaces Britain In Argentine Trade

Buenos Aires, Aug. 25.—The United States continues to be the leading supplier of Argentina's imports, according to official foreign trade figures for the first seven months of this year. New York, Aug. 25 (AP).—Cotton ruled about steady today in quiet trading. December recovered from 8.28 to 8.33 and closed at 8.30, with final prices 4 points net higher to 1 lower.

The market opened 1 to 3 points higher with the trade the chief buyer and offerings scarce. Failure of the AAA to announce cotton loan terms overnight, as had been expected, was disappointing and left traders still inclined to await this development. Later prices sagged with distant months going a few points under Wednesday's close, but scattered covering developed as stocks and grains rallied in the afternoon. Prices at one time were 3 to 8 points net higher, but a little hedge and local selling appeared at the close.

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that the lendable funds of the Nation's banks increased $50,000,000 to $2,980,000,000 in the week ended August 24.

The supply of idle cash was the largest since July 27. The increase resulted from Federal spending, decrease in money in circulation and imports of gold.

Fatal Beating Complicates Torso Search

Cleveland Police Find Body of Idle Usher; Suspect Pervert Killed Him.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Aug. 25.—A summer school student came upon the beaten body of an unemployed theater usher near the campus of Western Reserve University today and the police homicide squad, worn by 12 unsolved torso killings, added a new mystery to its list.

Orlando Schiavoni, jr., 20, the former usher, hadn't been home since Tuesday evening. He asked a neighbor girl, Mary Zucca, 18, to go to a show with him that evening, but Miss Zucca declined. She is the last person known to have seen Schiavoni alive.

Detective Sergt. James Hogan said police were working on the theory the youth had been bludgeoned to death by a pervert. Coroner S. R. Gerber said Schiavoni had been killed between 24 and 36 hours before his body was found today by Fred Alle, summer student at Case School of Applied Science.

Hogan said he was seeking a former companion of the youth for questioning.

The wooded spot where the body was found is only a few hundred yards from the Flora Stone Mather College for Women of Western Reserve and the Cleveland Museum of Art. Allen was cutting across a vacant lot when he saw the body.

Nearby police found an empty wine bottle and Coroner Gerber was attempting to determine whether Schiavoni had been drinking. Robbery was discarded as a motive when police found the usher's watch and ring untouched. He had no money with him when he left home.

The investigation of the dozen decapitation killings in the city in the past three years was continued today without success.

Foreign Markets.

London, Aug. 25 (AP).—Brewing and rayon shares were active and firm in the stock market today and railroad securities continued their recovery. Transatlantic issues closed slightly below Wednesday's final prices and British funds were about unchanged. The industrial section remained quiet but good support appeared in the rubber group. Foreign bonds sold higher and fairly active.

Paris—The bourse closed quiet with irregular price movements. Rentes were firm and finished with gains of 30 to 70 centimes while industrial showed fractional changes. Royal Dutch declined about 60 francs and Suez Canal was down 125 francs. Bank of France issue also lost 45 francs.

Liverpool—Wheat futures touched new lows for the year, except December, and final quotations were 1¾d to 1¾d net lower. Posthumous Paper Asks Drive To Eradicate Trichinosis in U.S.

Dr. Maurice C. Hall's Article Calls for Proper Inspection of Pork to Wipe Out Disease That Sometimes Kills Human Beings.

A voice from the dead yesterday called upon Federal, State and local government to join hands in the eradication of trichinosis, a sometimes fatal disease which is far more common than is generally supposed.

In an article published posthumously in Public Health Reports, weekly publication of the United States Public Health Service, Dr. Maurice C. Hall pleads that greater public attention be focused on the malady, its causes and means of control.

Dr. Hall, chief of the zoology division of the National Institute of Health, research unit of the Public Health Service, died on May 1.

Fifty years ago it was known that trichinosis, a disease caused by eating infected pork, was probably a greater problem in the United States than in any other country but little has been done about it, Dr. Hall wrote.

Considered "Minor."

Even today, he said, trichinosis is considered a "minor" health problem.

"It can now be definitely branded as fiction," he said, with a notation to the effect that there was an export trade involved, and that the literature showed a desire to make facts fit the needs of that export trade played a role in the minds of observers who did not lack the mental qualifications to draw sound conclusions from adequate data, provided they had an unprejudiced status in the matter.

"There is no chance that scientists and the medical and veterinary professions will again fail to carry out their mission in the protection of the public health.

"Half-Century Wasted."

"We have wasted a half-century, at what cost in health and life one hesitates to consider, but now we believe that the more enlightened livestock and packing industries will aid in removing the handicap of trichinosis from their industries, and will not ask that we perpetuate the disease yet another half-century."

He pointed out that this country's high trichinosis rate was the result of our high level of prosperity. Garbage pails are full and rich in pork scraps, which are fed to swine in garbage-feeding plants and in small hog lots.

"The basic solution of the problem," Dr. Hall wrote, "is keeping raw and inadequately cooked pork scraps out of the feed of swine."

Meat packers should insist upon improvements in swine raising, he said, refusing to purchase and market stock which has been fed carelessly.

While proper cooking of pork will kill trichinae, Dr. Hall pointed out that the public habitually disregards such warnings. He suggested a Nation-wide campaign, co-ordinated by the Public Health Service and the Bureau of Animal Industry, to eliminate the practice of feeding raw and undercooked pork scraps to swine and to establish 100 per cent meat inspection by skilled personnel.

A Business That Is a Pleasure

I have a friend who needs a partner and a manager, either lady or gentleman. He is 38 years of age, Continental, came to this country first in 1918. Has made six trips around the world in the interest of his work interviewing almost every important person you can think of, not only in foreign countries, but this country as well. Has written eight books, featured in motion picture shorts and has been on the air many, many times. His syndicated articles have appeared in 204 newspapers in this and foreign countries. This man is on the road to greater things. Now that the World's Fair opening is nearing, he needs a partner and manager who can make an investment of from ten to fifteen thousand dollars. You will receive a one-half interest in all his earnings. This is a rare opportunity. I am stopping at the Willard Hotel and will be glad to see those interested if you will write 297, Washington Post, giving phone number.

Bob Burns Says—

The thing that holds us Americans together more than anything else is the pride of our country. Every smooth politician knows that the surest way to arouse the voters is to play on the traditions of our forefathers.

One summer a student left a book at Uncle Hods' house called "The History of the South." Uncle Hod sat around for several weeks readin' the book and finally one day, he called his eight boys to him and he says "Listen, you boys was all born right here in the country that's jest steeped in Southern chivalry and I want you to live up to it. Hereafter when your maw finishes plowin' in the evenin', I want one of you boys to unhitch the mules for her!"

Girl's Attacker To Be Hanged At Midnight

Received Death Penalty for Assault Upon Montgomery Child.

Baltimore, Aug. 25.—Less than three months after criminally attacking 12-year-old Etta May Coleman near her home at Middlebrook, Md., James A. Turner, 25-year-old colored man, will be hanged at midnight tonight in the Maryland State Penitentiary.

On May 31 he attacked the girl as she walked from her farm home in Montgomery County toward a school bus on the main road. On June 28 he changed his plea from not guilty to guilty and was sentenced to death by Judge Hammond Urner at Rockville.

The girl suffered two permanent scars on her head and cuts on the body. For several days she lay near death in Montgomery County General Hospital. Turner had been brought here to avoid possibility of a lynching. Gov. Harry Nice refused a commutation of the sentence.

In a confession, Turner said his attack was not planned. He told police of chasing the girl across a wheat field, beating her on the head with a stone, and then hitting her with a larger stone when she failed to lose consciousness. He later struck her with a tree trunk. Miss Coleman identified him from a hospital bed by the sound of his voice.
